NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Mayor Mitchel is a tango devotee. Some one suggested to him yesterday that his headaches might be due to his indulgence in the dance.

THREATENS CIVIL WAR IN IRELAND

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—A fiery threat of civil war in Ireland if the Home Rule bill is passed at the session of Parliament, which opened today, was made by the Right Hon. Walter Long, who was chosen by the opposition in the House of Commons to lead the fight against the Home Rule bill.

The Liberals had just moved the acceptance of King George's conciliatory opening speech when Mr. Long opened the Unionists' fight against Home Rule.

"One hundred thousand men in Ulster stand ready to sacrifice their lives in resisting the conditions that this bill will impose," declared Mr. Long. "The Unionists in Parliament herewith demand a general election to allow the people to have their say on Home Rule."

Enormous crowds gathered in the streets around the Parliament building and thronged the thoroughfares in which King George drove from Buckingham Palace today to read the speech from the throne opening the session of Parliament.

In opening the King said that proposals would be submitted at the present session for the reconstruction of the House of Peers. England's relations with the entire world are now peaceful, King George said, and there is nothing in the foreign relations of the kingdom at this time to arouse dread.

The utmost attention was given to the King's reference to home rule for Ireland.

"It is my most earnest wish that all parties and creeds may heal their dissensions and lay the foundation of a lasting settlement," said the King.

"Grave future difficulties are threatened in this matter unless it is handled with foresight and judgment and in a spirit of mutual concession."

King George regretted that the political factions had been unable to arrive at a conclusion on home rule.

George appealed to the members of Parliament to forget petty differences and unite upon the common ground of patriotism.

In concluding his speech the King expressed his gratification over the results of the international conference on safety at sea, held in this city, and the prospect for the enactment of progressive measures for the benefit of the people.

Hundreds of detectives guarded the royal party on the trip to and from Parliament building and swarmed about the entrance of the building to prevent militant suffragettes from making any demonstration against the King and Queen.

WHIPPING INQUIRY IS BEGUN

"There never was a boy who wasn't all the better for an occasional smart touch of hickory.

"Sparing the rod today is more to blame for the youngsters who are tainted with rowdyism than any other cause.

"As soon as the boy finds out he can do as he pleases without fear of bodily punishment, you can give him all the arguments in the world and they won't do a bit of good.

"If some of the school teachers performed the duty of whipping bad boys that is left undone by parents, there would be fewer hoodlums on the streets." — From interview with Judge William E. Fowler.

The horsewhipping of fourteen-year-old Alfred Chapdelaine of Grafton by order, as the boy's father says, of Judge William E. Fowler of the Grafton District Court, will be brought to the official attention of Governor Walsh and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Subscriptions were started in Grafton today for a fund to be known as "The Chapdelaine Justice Fund." It is to be used to secure counsel who shall bring the case to the attention of the Governor and the S. P. C. C. in due legal manner.

The horsewhipping of the boy has already been put before the Governor by letters of protest from Grafton and Worcester County parents.

CALLS WHIPPINGS BRUTAL.

In addition to this, Edward Mortimer of Grafton, member of the Governor's Council, said that the whipping, as it was told to him, was "brutal." Councillor Mortimer said that Judge Fowler is one of his personal friends and he was surprised.

Councillor Mortimer talked over the telephone today from his home in Grafton to the AMERICAN'S correspondent. He said:

"The action of Judge Fowler was surprising to me. The horsewhipping given by Adelard Chapdelaine to his fourteen-year-old son, Alfred, as it was told to me, was brutal punishment. I believe the saying 'Spare the rod and spoil the child,' but I do not favor unmerciful punishment.

"DUTY OF THE PARENTS."

"A punishment of this sort should not be inflicted by order of a Massachusetts Court. It is the duty of parents to properly punish their children. If the Chapdelaine boy is cut, bruised and marked, the assault was brutal.

"Judge Fowler, who is said to have given this order, must have had good reason for the disposition he made of reason for the disposition he made of this case."

Frank S. Allen of the Grafton Board of Selectmen says:

"The Chapdelaine boy, who, they tell me, is cut and bruised by the horsewhipping given by his father at an order of a Massachusetts court, received unmerciful punishment. I don't know the absolute facts in the case, but whatever they might be, no child should be brutally treated by our courts for a petty offense. This was the boy's first appearance in court."

Auditor Fleetwood replied: "I certainly wouldn't put it under 'other expenses,' where it would stick out."

Whereupon Counsel Coolidge of the road protested so vehemently against the phrase "yellow dog" in this connection that this animal became the feature of the hearing.

ENGLISH TO SUBMIT EVIDENCE THAT LOST GIRL IS STILL ALIVE

Eleanor Arlin's clothing, which she wore when she disappeared from her Brookline home, January 8, or a note she has written since then, will be produced by William E. English today to convince Mrs. Calvin Gould, the girl's aunt, that he knows where Miss Arlin is confined—if English's promise this morning is to be accepted.

Dr. W. J. Rogers, however, who has been foremost in the search for the girl, said today that he is confident Mr. English is mistaken in thinking he knows where Miss Arlin is.

GIRL CANNOT BE SEEN.

Mrs. Gould refused to see Mr. English early today. Mr. English said before the interview:

"I am prepared to meet Mrs. Gould today and I will have no trouble in convincing her that I know where Miss Arlin is.

"I cannot take her to the sanitarium for we might be followed. But if I cannot appeal to her reason, I will produce a note from Miss Arlin, or if necessary some of the clothing the girl wore when she disappeared, to prove that I am not mistaken.

"I will do anything in reason—but the girl is not in shape to see anyone."

WILL TELL LATER.

While not ready at the present time to explain what he means by this statement, he added:

"The cause for Miss Arlin's disappearance was an unusual one."

"I am confident at least one person close to Miss Arlin knows the reason for her disappearance and her present whereabouts.

Well Known Makes of Used Motor Cars for Sale

With a new crop of automobiles marketed each year the majority of old ones seldom render full service—or even a good-sized fraction of full service—to their first owners.

Many 1912 and 1913 models will soon be replaced by those of 1914. And the choicest of the replaced cars will find offering through the American's "Want Ad" columns headed "Used Cars and Accessories."

Most of them will be given a fresh coat of paint, and have their power plants thoroughly overhauled before they find this ready market place. To all appearances and for every practical purpose they have been made over anew.

So if you have been harboring the idea of taking this financial short-cut to becoming an automobilist, now is the time to follow the news of the latest offerings as it appears daily in the American.

Or if you are looking for some particular make or model of car, write a "Want Ad" of your own. When it is ready, leave it with any of the American's "Want Ad" stations, the branch office at 264 Washington street, Main office 80 Summer street, or case the sooner the real mystery will be solved.

"By the time Miss Arlin has recovered this mystery ought to be solved.

"If at that time nobody else will tell where she is I will do so."

Mrs. Arlin, the girl's mother, finds herself in a condition too feeble to permit her to visit Boston in person at this time. The shock of her daughter's disappearance has been a serious one to the aged woman, and her health, as a consequence, has for several days been very poor.

She has delegated Mrs. Calvin C. Gould, her sister, to see Secretary English today in her stead. Mrs. Gould will attempt to get some definite information from English despite the failure of Dr. Rogers, the Brookline dentist, and Inspector Thomas Lynch of the Boston police, who interrogated English in vain.

Both Dr. Rogers and Inspector Lynch admitted they believed English is sincere in the belief that he knows where the girl is, although they do not themselves think he does know.

RELATIVES MEET AUNT.

Mrs. Gould, on her arrival here, was greeted by Mrs. William Gay, a niece, living at No. 27 Palmer street, Waltham, and Mrs. Vivian Sutcliffe, Mrs. Gay's daughter, of No. 34 Banks street, Waltham. Dr. William J. Rogers of Brookline, whose wife is a cousin of the missing girl, told Mrs. Gould that his interview with English was fruitless, and that he did not believe English knew the girl's whereabouts.

Mrs. Gould could not be shaken in her belief that English was sincere in his story of knowing Miss Arlin's whereabouts. She said:

"I am here to try to learn definitely whether or not Mertie is confined in a sanitarium, as Mr. English says. I shall ask him to take me to her. When I see him I can tell in a moment whether or not Mr. English knows what he is talking about when he says that Mertie is held in a sanitarium."

SCORE DRIVEN OUT BY FIRE IN SOUTH END

Silas W. Lane, the sexton, declared that the fire might have been set, but added that he didn't have any evidence to back up the statement. He simply knew that everything about the church was all right when he banked his furnace fires for the night. Two hours later the edifice was in flames.

Inspectors Grady and Hardiman inspected every foot of the premises in an effort to find traces of incendiarism.

Hundreds of persons fled from nearby lodging houses and apartment houses in a panic as the flames burst through the roof and windows of the church and leaped toward their homes. Scores of others were ordered from neighboring dwellings when the 110-foot steeple of the church threatened to collapse.

Hoseman George Darrah of Engine 6 had his right hand cut by falling slate and several other firemen had narrow escapes from falling beams and windows. Twice the firemen were ordered out of the church through fear of falling walls.

BRAVE DEATH FOR PORTRAIT.

Superintendent S. K. Canfield of the Boston Fire Patrol and Lieutenant Abbott of the Protective Department braved death to rescue an oil painting of the Rev. Hosea Ballou, first pastor of the church, from the vestry in the basement. Three times they were driven back by the flames, but finally succeeded in cutting the portrait from its frame.

The Rev. Stephen H. Roblin, pastor of the church, his wife and William H. Cook, chairman of the standing committee, reached the scene while the fire was at its height and a consultation was held. Cook later telephoned to the other members of the committee and a meeting will be held today to decide upon a place to hold future services of the congregation.

The interior of the church was burned out and practically everything in it, including the $10,000 organ, destroyed. The communion set and church records were locked in a safe and escaped the flames although several thousand dollars' worth of silver plate, jewelry, valuable linens, etc., belonging to the Miner Charitable Society are believed to have been lost.

The fire was discovered by C. P. Adams, manager of the Back Bay Hotel, on the opposite side of Columbus avenue, who sounded the alarm. Two more alarms were turned in in rapid succession and twenty minutes later Chief Mullen ordered a fourth which brought all of the intown apparatus to the scene.

SCORES FLEE IN PANIC.

From vestry to cupola the edifice was a bank of fire which worked its way through the walls and roof and shot towards a block of houses in Cazenove street. Ten families fled from the "Le Brun," a five-story brick apartment house, at No. 17 Cazenove street, which was threatened by the flames. Landlords and lodgers fled from houses at Nos. 7, 9, 11, 13, 15 and 15A Cazenove street. Much damage was done by water in several of these houses, as firemen ran lines of hose into the dwellings to reach the rear of the burning church.

Persons living in the houses at Nos. 258 to 262 Columbus avenue were ordered into the street by the police, as it was thought the church steeple, which threatened to collapse, might fall on the roofs. Thirty lodgers fled from Nos. 63 and 65 Clarendon street, which adjoined the church and were in immediate danger. Miss Lillian Harter, a lodger, ran through the house at No. 63 Clarendon street and did not leave until everybody had reached the street safely.

MANY NARROW ESCAPES.

The fire was a spectacular one and gave the firemen one of the hardest fights in years. Slate and glass fell into the street in showers, carrying with it the interior balconies. Two of the walls were left in a weakened condition and may have to be pulled down. Tons upon tons of water were poured into the church, but it was three hours before the fire was under control.

The church was built in 1871 and was one of the handsomest and best appointed edifices in Boston. The vestry in the basement had a seat-

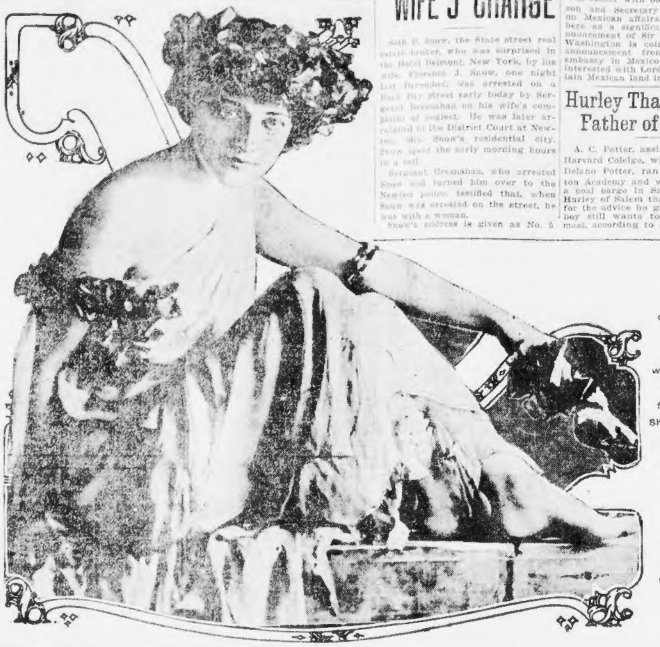
DESTINED TO MARRY SEVEN, NANCE GWYN WOULD DIVORCE NO. 4



Nance Gwyn, known off the stage as Mrs. Fabia Williams, who has filed suit to divorce her fourth husband. She has been told by Hindoo soothsayer that she will marry seven times. She is shown here in the costume she wears in her "Dance of the Dawn."

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Alimony of $1,000 a month is demanded by Mrs. Nance Fabia Williams, known on the stage as Nance Gwyn, creator of the "Dance of the Dawn." She has filed suit for divorce from Charles Williams, naming "Nanette, Sucre-Femme," whose real name is not given.

The complaint alleges Williams is "sole heir to many fortunes," has an income of about $25,000 a year, and will ultimately be worth many millions. He is a partner in the firm of Thomas Agnew & Sons, London, picture dealers.

Mrs. Williams has been married four times, despite the fact she is not yet twenty-seven. Her first two husbands died, and the third, Thomas Caffrey, was divorced.

"Despite my four experiences," Mrs. Williams asserts, "I do not feel I know men thoroughly. And although there is no particular individual in prospect now, I shall probably marry again. A Hindoo soothsayer once told me that I was destined to have seven husbands."

Mr. Williams spends most of his time traveling between London and Paris. London is his home, but he is visiting now in New York. He was served with the complaint at No. 590 Fifth avenue.

TAKE BROKER ON STREET ON WIFE'S CHARGE

Seth P. Snow, the State street real estate broker, who was surprised in the Hotel Belmont, New York, by his wife, Florence J. Snow, one night last December, was arrested on a Back Bay street early today by Sergeant Bresnahan on his wife's complaint of neglect. He was later arraigned in the District Court at Newton, Mrs. Snow's residential city. Snow spent the early morning hours in a cell.

Sergeant Bresnahan, who arrested Snow and turned him over to the Newton police, testified that, when Snow was arrested on the street, he was with a woman.

Snow's address is given as No. 5 Newbury street. Mrs. Snow is living at No. 23 Stearns street, Newton Centre. She went to the Newton police yesterday and said that her husband was not complying with an order of the Probate Court that he pay her $25 a week. She declared that three payments had lapsed and asked for his arrest on the ground of neglect.

Snow pleaded not guilty to the neglect charge and his lawyer asked that the charge be dismissed. Sergeant Bresnahan testified to the arrest. Judge Bacon said he would continue the case two weeks.

On December 22, last, the newspapers printed a sensational story about a midnight trip that Mrs. Snow made to New York the Saturday night before, in pursuit of her husband. The story said that Mrs. Snow had had detectives on her husband's trail, that the detectives followed Snow to New York, then telephoned Mrs. Snow. She called her sister. The two women caught the midnight express for New York, were met by the detectives, went to the Hotel Belmont, and there surprised Mr. Snow. Mrs. Snow confronted her husband, then made complaint to the hotel management, which resulted in a man, alleged to be Mr. Snow, being ordered from the hotel.

KAUFMAN, UP AGAIN, DENIES "CONFESSION"

August Kaufman, sentenced to a term of from four to seven years in State Prison for breaking into the Rhodes Brothers store, swore to Judge Chase in the Superior Court today that he had made no confession to Sergeant Anderson after he had bene sentenced yesterday.

On account of the alleged confession which was given out by the police last night, in which, Anderson claimed, Kaufman admitted his guilt in ten to a dozen burglaries, Kaufman had been brought into court again today. Judge Chase revoked the sentence imposed yesterday, and withheld his decision for two weeks to allow an investigation.

Sergeant Anderson testified today to Judge Chase that when he had taken Kaufman back to the detention room after his sentence, he had made his "confession." Anderson detailed the burglar's story again.

Kaufman vigorously denied that he had made any confession. He admitted Anderson and Irwin, also a police sergeant, had asked him questions about the other breaks, but declared that he refused to discuss them at all.

"Before God, your honor," declared Kaufman, "I did not make any such statement."

Sergeant Irwin ,today on the stand, admitted that he was not present when the "confession" was made, and testified that when he returned with Anderson, Kaufman would have nothing more to say about the robberies.

MEN AGREE TO PIECE-WORK ON SUPPLY SHIP

The workmen at the Charlestown Navy Yard have agreed to accept the piece-work plan for the construction of the new million-dollar supply ship. Dispatches from Washington say this action is believed to have removed the only obstacle to Boston getting the big contract.

Secretary Daniels of the Navy Department told the Massachusetts delegation at Washington that he would announce his decision tomorrow.

A favorable decision will give the Charlestown Navy Yard a greatly desired construction job, one which the Boston AMERICAN has been advocating from the first.

A new bid was submitted to the navy yard by Congressman Roberts, on behalf of the Charlestown yard. It was lower than any other estimates, but it was conditional upon the men being willing to labor on a piece-work basis, rather than by the day.

The revised bid added $125,364 to the original, making the new estimate $1,171,713.26.

This increase provndes $77,320 for steam engineering, about $20,000 more for incidentals, and for a 5 to 10 per cent. overlay, to make sure the yard can keep within the revised figure.

SOFIA, Feb. 10.—Queen Eleonore of Bulgaria intimated today her intention of visiting the United States in the Spring of 1915. The visit is to be undertaken with the full approval and by the wish of King Ferdinand.

For some time it has been an open secret that Queen Eleonore is very anxious to get first hand knowledge of the people who have shown such a great kindness to the Bulgarian nation in the time of its terrible distress, caused by two wars. Only a few days ago, when the Queen was expressing her grateful thanks to the Hearst papers for their help, she hinted that if all went well she hoped one day to personally thank William Randolph Hearst and all those who had come so lovingly to her countrymen's rescue.

Today's decision was made known to the Panama Exposition Commissioners, Andrews, Rees and Brown, who, with the American Minister at Sofia, had a two hours' audience with King Ferdinand and Queen Eleonore at the royal palace. The Commissioners were received with the assurance that both the King and Queen felt a lively interest in the San Francisco Exposition and would promise participation.

It was then that the Queen informed the Commissioners of her intention to visit America next Spring. She will probably sail from an English port on one of the big liners and disembark at New York. One thing is certain, she will travel very simply.

Stole Jewels to Educate Orphan

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10—George Gunning, who the police say has an international reputation as a "society butler thief," left here in charge of detectives from Portsmouth, N. H., where he will arrive today to answer a charge of stealing $20,000 worth of diamonds while serving as butler for Mrs. George H. Studebaker in June, 1912. Gunning said that the proceeds of his recent robberies have been used to educate two orphan girls.

$40,000 Estate Left by Senator Cullom

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 10.—Property valued at $40,000 was divided among three heirs in the will of ex-United States Senator Shelby M. Cullom, which was filed in Probate Court today. The will, drawn in Washington in 1911, gives $15,000 to Miss Victoria Fisher, sister of Mrs. Cullom. The remainder will be divided between Catherin Cullom Brown, wife of Philip Brown of Springfield, Mass., and Eleanor Cullom Ridgely Parker of Washington.

Schmidt eMets Woman Friend

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Miss Bertha Zech, who at thetrial of Hans Schmidt, found guilty of the murder of Anna Aumueller, testified that the ex-priest had asked her to have her life insured under the name of his victim, sought an interview with the convicted man. When Schmidt was brought to the District Attorney's office he discovered that a stenographer had been posted to take down his conversation with Miss Zech. The two exchanged only a few commonplaces in German.

Fast in Ice Where Robbers Threw Him

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 10.—Knocked senseless yesterday by robbers and thrown over the railing of a bridge across the Mississippi River to the ice sixty feet below, according to his explanation, David Wredburg, aged twenty-four, was frozen fats and had to be pulled from his perilous position at the end of a lasso. CHANLER NO LONGER GRIEVES FOR CAVALIERI

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Whoever pictures Robert Winthrop Chanler as wearing the willow because of the second marriage of his erstwhile bride, Lina Cavalieri, is greatly mistaken. The giant artist was in high spirits today. Shorn of his bristling black whiskers and looking young in a white silk blouse and tan trousers thrust into high boots he welcomed an AMERICAN reporter to his studio at No. 47 East Nineteenth street.

"Have you heard the news about Cavalieri?" inquired the caller.

"What about her?" the artist demanded in businesslike voice with no undertone of sentiment.

"She has announced her marriage to Lucien Muratore."

"I thought she had married Muratore long ago. I don't care a rap about Cavalieri. Come and see my new ducks. Isn't that one with the green head a beauty?"

"But you wish her happiness, don't you—Cavalieri-Muratore I mean?"

"Oh, yes."

The man of the tempestuous honeymoon with the prima donna grinned. "I wish everybody happiness."

"You're not married, Mr. Chanler?"

"Oh, Lord, no."

"Nor intend to be?"

"Naw."

"Mme. Cavalieri says to be happy you must marry some one of your kind, your own race, your own temperament and tastes and class. Do you believe it?"

Again a smile of contentment adorned the artist's large features.

"May be so, I dunno," he conceded.

RELATIVES OF ASYLUM VICTIM TO ASK INQUIRY

WORCESTER, Feb. 16.—There was persistent reports today that an investigation into the death of William Nannis of Lowell from hot baths at the Worcester Insane Hospital early yesterday would be demanded from District Attorney Stiles by Nannis' relatives as soon as they arrived from Lowell.

Medical Examiner Frederick H. Baker viewed Nannis' body but refused to hold an autopsy, saying:

"I did not perform an autopsy because there was evidence enough to show that the young man died of heart trouble and not as a result of any brutal treatment."

Nevertheless the report that an investigation would be asked was active, based on these circumstances: Nannis was committed only last Friday. He received the usual physical examination, disclosing a weak heart. In spite of this weakness he was given a hot bath because he was excited. The question is raised why a youth suffering from heart weakness should be given a bath at too high temperature.

The Chaperon's Chatter

By THE DOWAGER.

There are numerous smart affairs on the calendar for today, prominent among them being the dance which Mrs. Charles E. Perkins of Commonwealth avenue is giving this evening at the Algonquin Club in honor of her granddaughter, Miss Edith Perkins, who is a prominent bud of the year.

This is the second dinner dance which Mrs. Perkins has given for her charming young granddaughter, the first having taken place at the Algonquin Club on November 28.

* * *

Another interesting debutante affair tonight is the dinner-dance which Mrs. Augustus Hemenway is giving for Miss Alice Thorndike at her home, No. 273 Clarendon street. Miss Thorndike is the popular secretary of the 1914 Sewing Circle. She was presented at a large tea, earlier in the season, which her parents gave for her at their Commonwealth avenue home in November. She was later given a large ball at the Copley-Plaza.

* * *

There is an interesting list of smart patronesses for the recital which Charles Anthony is giving in the salon at the Copley-Plaza at 3 o'clock this afternoon, when several tea parties will be in progress, the patronesses for which include: Mrs. Bryce J. Allan, Mrs. S. Reed Anthony, Mrs. Boylston Beal, Mrs. M. S. Bernheimer, Miss Rose L. Dexter, Mrs. Amory Eliot, Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, Mrs. John Chipman Gray, Mrs. Edward B. Hill, Mrs. James Jackson, Mrs. Eben D. Jordan, Mrs. John M. Longyear, Mrs. Nathan Matthews, Mrs. George H. Mifflin, Mrs. Samuel Mixter, Mrs. Carl Muck, Mrs. Thorndike Nourse, Mrs. Southerland Orr, Mrs. William L. Parker, Mrs. William Phillips, Mrs. Neal Rantoul, Mrs. William Roscoe Thayer and Mrs. Herbert Windeler.

* * *

Prominent among the affairs last night was the dance which Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Turner gave at the Country Club in Brookline for Mr. Turner's debutante sister, Miss Esther Turner.

Mrs. Turner before her marriage was the dashing Marie Lee and is one of the very successful young matrons of her smart set. Mrs. Turner was a bride of June.

MISS MACVANE TELLS HOW SHE WAS HOUNDED

Dorothea Macvane's own story of her experience as a suspected international spy is contained in a letter from the former Cambridge girl—now an opera singer of international reputation—to Boston friends.

"When it was first whispered to me that I was suspected of being a spy," writes Miss Macvane, "I simply laughed. It made me feel just like Fanny Gordon in my own sister's stories.

"Then Director Borboni, the opera manager, called me into the office one day and tremblingly announced to me that he had been warned that by harboring a 'French spy' he was placing himself in a perilous position.

"I could see that he admired me for my apparent daring and the millions he thought I was getting in my side-line of international spy.

"Everywhere I went I was warned. Waiters that served me in the hotel restaurant, ladies at afternoon teas, naval officers whom I met at social gatherings, shop people, coachmen, children and members of the company, all gave me warning.

"Suddenly things began to get serious. My footsteps were dogged everywhere. I was told that when a person is suspected of a crime like mine, their mail is always held up and opened by the ogvernment. I tried to get into touch with the American embassy, but could not, even my telephone calls being mysteriously cut off.

"Becoming desperate, I sent Mme. Langlois to purchase tickets for Rome. She came back with a white and frightened face, sayng that she had been told that if we tried to leave we would both be arrested.

"Late one night after the opera was over I was sitting in my room, taking down my hair, preparing to retire, when I seemed to feel someone's eyes upon me. I whispered to Mme. Langlois. She crawled along the side of the room and suddenly opened a door there. Sure enough, a man was there.

"Finally through the kindness of a friend, I received a communication from the American ambassador."

Old Colony Trust Employes Banquet

Employes of the Old Colony Trust Company banqueted last night at the Copley-Plaza, and after "turns" by Miss Alyce L. Donnelly, William Bradstreet Parker, Edward Payson True and John Thomas, dancing began and continued till midnight.

FISTS FELL JAP STATESMAN AS HE DEFENDS U. S.

TOKIO, Feb. 16.—In the midst of uproar and clamor Parliament today voted down a resolution of no confidence in the government by 205 to 163. The vote came at the end of a bitter debate during which a number of fist fights occurred. The violence reached such a pitch that it looked as though soldiers would have to clear the halls.

The opponents of the government during debate on the resolution attacked the policy of the foreign department in dealing with the United States over the California anti-alien land law.

The supporters of the government rallied to the defence of the ministry and were victorious. During the melee Mr. Ito, leader of the Nationalist forces oposing the government, was struck upon the head and carried unconscious from the hall.

An excited crowd of 25,000 persons, held in check by troops, lined the neighboring street waiting eagerly for the result of the vote.

Brains Still O. K.? Then Grapple with This Head Twister

Here's another brain "twister":

"If a calendar clock, which indicates the second, minute, hour and the day of the month shows the correct time at 5 p. m. on Saturday, January 17, and gains 10 minutes daily, what will be the correct time when the clock indicates that it is 5 p. m. on February 17?"

PRESIDENT AND SIMS CONFER ON CANAL TOLLS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The Panama Canal tolls question was discussed at a conference between President Wilson and Representative Sims today. The latter is a member of the House Committe on Onter-Oceanic Canals. It is said that plans are now being made for putting into action the proper legislative machinery for repealing the Adamson act providing for the exemption of American coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls. A definite announcement as to the procedure is expected shortly.

Enough Senate Democrats are opposed to President Wilson's plan to repeal the tols provision, however, to threaten the President's control over that body. The minority is generally opposed to the President's views. This situation s the basis of the prediction that the Democrats will caucus on the question and attempt to bind recalcirant members by such action.

Senators O'Gorman and Chamberlain openly have voiced their opposition, and Senators Walsh, Martin and Pomerene have indicated their belief that the platform pledge should be fulfilled literally by retention of the free tolls.

Repeal of the act probably will be initiated in the House, where the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee is more in sympathy with Senate Committee on Inter-Oceanic Canals, of which Senator O'Gorman is chairman.

KELLEY POOL—THE FRAUD GAME CURLEY SAYS JOHN A. SULLIVAN BROUGHT TO BOSTON

I wish to say that I do not take back one solitary thing that I have said about him (John A. Sullivan). I have charged on the floor of this chamber at various meetings that he began his career as a pool shark, that he was the originator of Kelley pool in Boston—From a speech by Councilman James M. Curley, April 24, 1911.

Kelley pool is one of the best known games played on the pool tables, and because of the primary gambling principle of the game has been forbidden by the police. Despite this more money is won and lost through it than through any other pool game played in Boston today. It is not played now in the better class of billiard parlors, but continues to flourish in the cheap places where questionable characters assemble.

What made Kelley pool a success from the beginning was its lure for the ordinary player, the game being, at first sight, all luck and giving all players a fair chance.

It was at once seized upon by the sharps and the fleecing of innocent sportsmen reached an alarming stage.

SHARPS WORKED TOGETHER.

Two of the "sure-thing" men worked together in relieving the victim of his coin.

The game is in reality but a variation of the old "Sixty-One," or rotation game, and as many as fifteen can play at one time. The fifteen balls, numbered from one to fifteen, are racked in pyramid form as though for a straight pool, with the exception that the ball numbered one is at the apex of the pyramid.

Each player is given a pill from a leather bottle containing fifteen pills (small balls the size of a marble) numbered from one to fifteen, corresponding with the numbers of the pool balls. The player is supposed to keep the number of his pill to himself.

The balls are then "broken" with the cue ball, the players following each other by prearrangement. An "open break" is required—that is, the balls are hit hard and scattered.

The balls must be struck in rotation, the one ball first, the two second and so on, and a player must shoot at the balls of the lowest number on the table.

The object of the game is for a player to put into a pocket the ball, the number of which corresponds to the number of the pill in his pocket. If a man has, say, the 3 pill, and he is shooting at the 1 ball, and, after striking the 1 ball through any manner puts the 3 into a pocket, he wins the game. Any ball which a player puts into a pocket after striking the ball of the lowest number on the table is out of the game.

HOW GAME IS WON.

When the ball which corresponds to a man's pill goes off the table, unless he gets it himself the player is termed "dead." He cannot win that game, but continues to shoot in turn and may put the numbers of other men off; so that very often no one wins the game. In such a case the balls are again racked, and what is called a "double-header" is played.

The game without a stake is never payed and is unattractive. When a "double-header" is played the stake is doubled. Very often no one will win for several games, the original stake being added each time, until some one finally secures the ball which corresponds with his pill.

The sharps in "trimming" a "sucker," begin to play as strangers, but by signals allow each other to know what the numbers of their pills are. Once warned of a partner's pill number the confederate or confederates take care not to knock the corresponding ball into a pocket. The element of luck is in this way almost eliminated, and old hands at the game, when three or four men are playing, can easily figure out the pill of the "sucker."

ANOTHER CROOKED METHOD.

At the end of each game the pills are collected and shaken afresh from the bottle. A sharp frequently "forgets" to throw in his pill, which action, if it goes unnoticed, allows them to start the next game with two pills, and with greatly increased chances of winning.

Men who previously took but little interest in pool were snared by the "Kelley" game. Poolroom owners encouraged it because it was a fine game for the house, and it is safe to say that the greatest number of raids on poolrooms since the game was introduced in Boston have resulted from Kelley pool.

'Magic' Has American Premiere at the Toy

The first American performance of G. K. Chesterton's fantastic English comedy, "Magic," was given last evening at the Toy Theatre. Miss Lingard and Mr. Pember made the most of their roles and prevented what otherwise might have been a dreary performance. After the play Miss Dorothy Jordan appeared in a suite of old French dances and sent the audience home in good humor.

Health and Beauty Helps

By MRS. MAE MARTYN

Debby: You [illegible] an artificial appearance, but the delicate complexion will be given an added touch of refined elegance if you use the [illegible] lotion made by dissolving 4 ounces [illegible] (which you get at the druggist's) in ½ pint hot water or witch hazel. This lotion [illegible] condition and gives to a [illegible] charm. The [illegible] lotion dries quickly and cannot be detected when on, and its regular use guards against complexion [illegible].

Ann L.: You can remove your wrinkles and regain your youthful complexion by a short course of treatment with an [illegible]. This is made by dissolving 1 ounce [illegible] (any drug store carries this) in ½ pint water to which is added 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Best results follow when you apply this preparation at night. Rub well into the skin and do not remove until morning. This treatment banishes pimples, blackheads, blotches and wrinkles and leaves the skin clear, smooth and velvety. Nothing can equal it for reducing large pores and restoring the youth tint to the complexion.

Ima: Try a plain crystos tonic for your sore eyes and I am certain you will obtain quick relief. This is made by dissolving an ounce crystos (which I get at the druggist's) in a pint cold water. Its use will make the eyes bright and expressive and for all minor eye troubles such as weakness, aching muscles or granulated lids, is superior to anything you can buy.

A. D. N.: Yes, the parnotis treatment of weight reduction is entirely harmless and does away with dieting or violent exercise. It is easily prepared—just dissolve 4 ounces parnotis (which you get at your druggist's) in 1½ pints hot water. When it cools, take a tablespoonful three times daily until your weight is satisfactorily reduced. With this treatment your skin will be left smooth and free from wrinkles and no ill effects are experienced.

E. G.: Nature never intended woman to have hair on her cheeks. Get from your druggist a small original package of delatone and mix a little of the powder with water. Apply the paste to the superfluous hairs and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off and the hairs will come with it. After the skin is washed and dried it will be velvety and free from hair or blemish.

O. D.: Your dry, dandruff-laden scalp will respond quickly to a treatment with a plain quinzoin tonic which can be cheaply made at home as follows: To ½ pint alcohol add 1 ounce quinzoin (get at druggist's) then pour in ½ pint cold water. A little of this should be massaged well into the scalp at frequent intervals. This will stimulate the scalp-tissues, [illegible] banish dandruff and encourage a lovely growth of abundant, silky hair. This quinzoin tonic will benefit even the healthiest scalp and hair.

Molly: When I feel that all-gone feeling and [illegible] of chin and neck, or a breaking out of pimples at this time of the year, I get an ounce of kardene from any druggist's, dissolve it in a half-pint of alcohol (not whisky), add ½ cup of sugar and hot water to make a full quart. A quart costs very little made in this way. A tablespoonful should be taken before each meal. This old-fashioned kardene tonic expels poisonous accumulations from the blood, builds up waste tissue and restores full health and strength to weak, worn bodies.

Miss Z.: I have found no hair cleanser of so great benefit to my hair as canthrox shampoo. Just dissolve a teaspoonful canthrox in a cup hot water, then pour slowly on the head and rub gently. The lather thus created is very cleansing and invigorating, and rinsing leaves hair and scalp immaculately clean, while the hair dries quickly, with a delightfully soft fluff and rich glossiness. The regular use of canthrox is the very best health-insurance for scalp and hair of which I know.

TWIN STARS AT THE COLONIAL IN 'DOLL GIRL'

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The twin-star combination, in so far as it concerns Richard Carle and Hattie Williams, is as jolly an arrangement of talent as one could hope to find in an entire season's search for frisky entertainment. "The Doll Girl," which brought these two light hearted people to the Colonial last evening, began its local career with a substantial balance on the bright side of the ledger. Good cheer was abundant and there was more than enough to go around, which naturally aroused no objections.

Mr. Carle, to put it plainly, was just funny. His rather familiar style of humor found a safe resting place in "The Doll Girl" and from the somewhat gorgeous settings of that piece it was poured upon a willing audience. Doubtless Mr. Carle toils hard and earnestly at his art, but you would never suspect it from last evening's labors. The rich comedy of his nature flowed merrily into the evening—it rippled off his tongue and expressed itself in fantastic twists of his legs. And you responded with your best smiles and solid contentment. Dick Carle fairly sparkled with fun and "The Doll Girl" gave him plenty of room for a maximum of endeavor.

RECORD FOR JOLLITY.

Miss Williams discovered herself in good company and made the most of it. The piece reached the high-water mark of jollity when she sang "You're So Fascinating," a sprightly little tune that carried a whirlwind of action.

"The Doll Girl" proved diverting and agreeable in every respect. Its music was well within the prescribed bounds of successful musical comedy, and contained a number of sugar-coated melodies intended for popular tastes. Of these, "Come Over Here," which was sung by Miss Williams will be demanded at music stores today.

If there is strength in numbers, "The Doll Girl" had every reason to possess good qualities. No less than six carpenters of the drama were on the affair, as it appeared at the Colonial.

ENJOYED GOOD SPORT.

Mr. Carle and Miss Williams enjoyed exceptionally good support from Robert Evett, straight from the works of George Edwardes, Esq., London; Will West, who never fails in his solemn task of making other people laugh; Charles McNaughton, who capered feverishly through the piece, and Dorothy Webb, a dainty ingenue of the conventional type. One of the brigrt spots of the performance was a dancing number by Bessie DeVoie and A. Phillips. It was an artistic specialty.

"The Doll Girl" should be a good tonic for drooping spirits—especially with Richard Carle in such perfect form.

'The Great Ruby' at Castle Sq. Theatre

One of the most famous dramas that ever came from the Drury Lane Theatre, London, is "The Great Ruby," which is being presented this week at the Castle Square Theatre. Mr. Craig's players handled the melodrama capably at the opening performance last night.

The struggle between two men in the basket of a balloon, a jewelry shop in Bond street, Lord's cricket grounds on the day of the Oxford-Cambridge match, a flat in Mayfair, the lobby of a fashionable hotel and a military tournment in Agricultural Hall are among the scenes. The costumes are elaborate.

Miss Augusta Gill plays the Countess Mirtza Kharkoff capably Mr. Charlton appears as Prince Kassim Wadia Donald Meek has the part of Lord George Hardtopp and Mr. Walker is James Brett of Scotland Yard. Frederick Ormonde made just as good a villain as ever in the part of Morris Longman.

Doris Olson was a success as Lady Garnett. Maibel Colcord was Mrs. Elsmere, Ann Faystone was Brenda Elsmere and Miss Shirley Lousa Jupp.

St. James Theatre.

This is anniversary week a the St. James Theatre. Just a year ago Marcus Loew took charge of the house and entered it upon a career of vaudeville. To celebrate the event an especially strong bill has been secured, headed by Nana, sometimes called the "pet of the Parisian music halls." Nana was a success at yesterday's performances.

Holmes' Lecture.

The Burton Holmes travelogue this week will be devoted to Panama—"A Brand New Panama," the announcements read. The lectures will be given Friday night and Saturday afternoon.

Bowdoin Sq. Theatre.

"Traffic in Girls," a sensational film, was featured in the new bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. A dozen vaudeville features made up the program.

Annie Russell Makes Hit in "She Stoops to Conquer"

The attendance at the Hollis Street Theatre last night, when Annie Russell and her comedy company opened the final week of their present engagement, was so small as to warrant an immediate and searching inquiry on the part of some board or body charged with the defence of the city's fame as the intellectual, artistic and educational centre of the United States.

Annie Russell!

Oliver Goldsmith!

"She Stoops to Conquer, or the Mistakes of a Night!"

Well, one would not have been surprised at neglect of this sort by Pittsburgh, or Paterson, where one was properly and grievously shocked here in the shadow of Harvard, Tufts, Boston University, Boston College, Wellesley, Simmons and others "too numerous to mention."

Since it was originally produced at Covent Garden in 1773—the year before "Poor Noll's" death, at forty-six—Goldsmith's delightful comedy has been done by 1773 companies in every corner of the world. Last night's performance left nothing to be desired—except a houseful of people!

The playing of Oswald Yorke as "Young Marlow," that reticent young gentleman whose shyness led to his mistaking Mr. Hardcastle's house for an inn, was nothing short of capital. F. Percival Stevens was a completely satisfying "Tony Lumpkin," while Ffolliot Paget, as was to have been expected, brought to the role of Mrs. Hardcastle her accustomed grace, dignity and authority. The other parts were in capable hands.

Of Miss Russell there is nothing new to be said because no new and satisfying adjectives have been properly authorized since her previous engagement in Boston. The star was a living, breathing "Kate Hardcastle."

'Red Mill' Opens at the National

What must be held as one of the biggest events of the season occurred at the National Theatre last evening when the Morton Opera Company presented Montgomery and Stone's musical triumph, "The Red Mill." It was seen here for the first time at popular prices.

With a record of nearly twenty musical plays to his credit, Victor Herbert stands today as not only the most distinguished but the most prolific composer in America and who has done more to elevate musical plays to a scale of refinement than any American writer.

The book and lyrics of "The Red Mill" are by Henry Blossom, who will be readily recalled as the author of "Mlle' Modiste," "The Yankee Consul," "Checkers" and the other plays. The engagement of the Morton Opera Company at the National Theatre deserves and is assured of a successful run.

Walter Willis is seen as Con Kidder, and Arthur Conrad as Kid Connor. Their imitations of Montgomery and Stone are excellent. Anna Blonde, Georgia Campbell, Edwin Beck, Jed Freeborn and Harold Rehill are in the cast.

Loew's Orpheum.

The new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday was headed by the Oliver Armando troupe of acrobats, which contributed a sensational performance. There were other attractive acts, and new pictures.

Next Week's Bills.

"The Wedding Night," a spirited musical comedy with a long record of success, will be the attraction at the Shubert next Monday.

"Within the Law," the most brilliantly successful play of several seasons, with the original New York company, will move into the Majestic next Monday.

Raymond Hitchcock, in "The Beauty Shop," will begin its local engagement at the Tremont next Monday.

William H. Crane and Douglas Fairbanks, with a notable supporting company, will bring "The New Henrietta" to the Hollis next week.

"Stop Thief," which has already been presented at down town prices this season, will be Mr. Craig's offering at the Castle Square next week.

Plays That Remain.

"Under Cover" continues at the Plymouth, where playgoers are finding it the most diverting of the season's thrilling dramas.

"Years of Discretion" is now on its final week at the Tremont Theatre. It is a charming comedy of middle-life romance.

"'Way Down East" has begun another week at the Boston Theatre. This fine old play of New England rural life continues popular.

"When Dreams Come True" is drawing prosperity to the new Cort Theatre. Good music and smart music are its chief qualities.

Robert Hilliard, in "The Argyle Case," began a new week at the Park last evening. It is good melodrama, well acted.

"Prunella" has entered upon its final week at the Majestic. It is a charming dramatic fantasy, set to attractive music.

The motion pictures of Captain Scott's trip to the South Pole continue at Tremont Temple. Many things worth seeing are found in these pictures.

"Traffic in Souls," the photo play showing the horrors of white slavery, has begun a new week at the Globe.

KEITH'S SHOWS FIRST FILMS OF THE TANGO

If you are still in doubt about the proper way to dance the tango, the one-step, the Maxixe and other up-to-date dances, go to Keith's Theatre this week and see the motion pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, leading exponents of the new steps. The pictures, which are a novelty and one of the big features of the all-feature bill, made a big hit yesterday.

This is the first time a dancing picture has ever been produced.

This week's bill is one of the best offered at Keith's in months.

John Hyams and Leila McIntyre, late stars of "The Girl of My Dreams," appeared in a sketch entitled "The Quakeress." Miss McIntyre has the same entertaining mannerisms.

"Beauty Is Only Skin Deep," a playlet by Elizabeth Jordan, portrays the effort of a middle-aged Western woman whose husband has become a United States Senator to sufficiently improve her looks to permit of her remaining by her husband's side without embarassing him. The scene is in a beauty parlor, and before the eyes of the audience the beauty doctors shows what wonderful transformations their art can make.

Frederick V. Bowers is back with a new set of songs and dances.

Joseph Hart's production of "A Telephone Tangle" by Charlot Bannel shows several persons trying to telephone while a mischievous telephone operator persists in crossing the wires, which results in much confusion and merriment.

The El Rey sisters gave a clever exhibition of the tango and turkey trot on roller skates. Other attractive features are Mabel Sherman, who sings a few popular songs; Lane and O'Donnell, in an amusing tumbling act; Pealson and Gold, in a singing and whistling act, and the Great Patricks, in exceptional equilibristic stunts.

Gaiety Theatre.

"The Social Maids" supplied a new brand of music and mirth at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday, and it fell into immediate popularity. It was a new show throughout, presented by artists who knew the rules of good burlesque and followed them. George Stone and Etta Pillard headed the company, which, of course, was plentifully equipped with sprightly girls in smart costumes.

Howard Athenaeum.

Cora Livingston, the smartest of all female wrestlers, remains another week at the Old Howard, and yesterday she met a few more ambitious athletes of her own sex in mat contests. These were at least thrilling. The burlesque show was supplied by "The Robinson Crusoe Girls," with vaudeville features thrown in for good measure.

Scollay Square Olympia.

The new bill at the Scollay Square Olympia yesterday was headed by George Randall and Company, who presented a sketch called "All on Account of a Title." It proved to be one of the brightest comedies of the vaudeville season. The remaining numbers on the program were divided between musical features and smart frolics of the varieties.

Forbes-Robertson's Farewell.

Forbes-Robertson began his farewell week at the Shubert last evening, presenting "Caesar and Cleopatra." His final performance in Boston will be given next Saturday night and will be devoted to a selected program made up of acts from four of his most popular plays.

Waldron's Casino.

"The New Star and Garter" show, with Jack Conway furnishing most of the fun, arrived at the Casino Theatre yesterday for a week's stay. It was a lively entertainment.

Grand Opera House.

"A Trip to Paris," as seen at the Grand Opera House yesterday, was just what the followers of burlesque like in their entertainment. Oh, yes, there were girls—plenty of them.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggists Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

GIRLS! GIRLS! YOU MUST TRY THIS! DOUBLES BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIF

For 25 cents you can make your hair lustrous, fluffy, and abundant.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and acrefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

Among the actors are several of the favorites of the Pathe company, including this time the famous acting horse, Dick.

Every day the AMERICAN will present a short fiction story and that some afternoon and evening the story may be seen at the moving pictures.

(Afternoon or Evening)

CHAPTER I.

"MUVVER, whose lots of Indian is comin'!"

His great blue eyes bulging, seven-year-old Fred toddled into the settlers' camp on the Dakota plains, dragging after him Hattie, his five-year-old sister. From their playground at the top of the hill, the two children had seen a war band of Sioux, hideously arrayed in paint and feathers, plunging forward to where the home seekers had pitched their temporary camp in the wilds.

An alarm resounded through the camp. Men and women alike seized firearms, and, taking their stand within the enclosure formed by the wagons, opened fire on the Indians who already circling about the improvised fortress. The battle was short and bloody. One more harrowing chapter in the story of the building of the West. An inexperienced band of thirty men, women and children against one hundred war-like braves.

When the end was near the anguished mother, gathering up her babies hurriedly hid the boy and girl in a huge tool box, and the next instant fell with a bullet through her breast.

The camp was sacked and burned. Seeking pillage the Indians came upon the two little ones secreted in the box. After the Indian custom, the girl was bound hand and foot and rolled over the edge of a cliff. The boy was carried back to the Sioux village, there to be brought up as a warrior among them. With him went Dick, the pet horse of the settlers.

CHAPTER II.

Hattie escaped the death which had been planned for her, and freeing her hands and feet of the bonds, wandered back to the scene of the ruined camp. There, Dick, the horse, who had strayed away from the Indian village, found her; and mounting the faithful animal, Hattie was borne to the nearest white settlement, where she was adopted into the family of Sheriff King.

Fred, for ten years an unwilling member of the Sioux tribe, grew up in the ways of the Indians, though always on the lookout for some means of escape. His opportunity came one day when, out on a hunting expedition, he fell across some trappers from the nearby white settlement, to whom he told his story and was escorted back to the people of his kind again.

And there, in the little frontier town, he met once more the sister who had been snatched away from him, on the tragic day ten years before, when the red men slew the parents.

CHAPTER III.

A thirst for vengeance now possessed these two orphans of the wild and daily they planned a means of satisfying it. Suitors came for the hand of Hattie, but were sadly turned away; while Fred, straight, lithe and skilful as the Indians who had tutored him, occupied himself as a trapper and waited his opportunity.

Then, one day, the Sioux again took to the war path. Fred immediately enlisted as a scout. There was a Spartan parting between brother and sister.

"I shall not return until I have paid the debt," he said.

"God keep you, and make your aim true," replied Hattie as the youth rode away.

But she, too, had a plan, and a purpose to share in the toll which was to be exacted for the slaughter of their parents. As Fred disappeared behind the hills she mounted the faithful Dick and silently rode down the trail.

Off in the foothills Fred discovered a group of Indians who were planning a sudden descent upon the settlement. A score of the braves were already on the move, and from the cover of a boulder the boy opened fire.

Hattie, riding hard, came upon the unequal combat as it waged, and dropping beside her brother, they together held the band at bay until, deceived by the belief that a strong force of white men lay entrenched behind the rocks, the Indians withdrew until the main body of the tribe had come up.

The ammunition of the orphans of the wild was now almost exhausted. With the arrival of the Sioux reinforcements, they would overwhelm the resolute boy and girl and sweep on to the destruction of the settlement.

"Give me what ball and powder you have left," cried Fred, "saving one shot for yourself. Then ride to the settlement and give warning."

He took his sister in his arms and kissed her fondly. Then he lifted her into the saddle.

"Now, Dick, boy," he cried, "ride—ride, boy, as you have never ridden before!"

Off in a trial of dust, Hattie, on the back of the faithful Dick, sped toward the threatened settlement. Through a defile in the mountains the war band of the Sioux was advancing to the attack, with none but Fred before them to check their advance. Loading his two rifles and his brace of revolvers, he lay, with his nerves steeled awaiting the attack.

Across the open space swept a horde of shrieking red men. Fred waited until the front rank was but one hundred yards away, and then opened fire. Two red men fell, and the others swung back in confusion over the attack. Again they advanced, and once more Fred's aim beat back the advance. And now they began circling about the boulder defence of the boy, as now and again his rifle rang out, with the impassioned cry of:

"That for my mother! And that for my father!"

Hattie was speeding on the back of the faithful Dick toward the settlement. Fred's ammunition was fast becoming exhausted.

Fred holds off the Indian attack.

CHAPTER IV.

Hattie arrived in the settlement in a swirl of dust, and sounded the call to arms. A hundred settlers were instantly in the saddle.

"Follow me," she cried, and with fresh ammunition at her side and Dick's hoofs beating upon the hardened trail, she was off again to the rescue of her brother.

Only desultory shots rang out as they neared the point where Fred lay in concealment. Then, suddenly, the war whoop resounded through the hills, and the band of two hundred braves dashed forward.

"I come, brother, I come!" called Hattie, leaping into the clearing, at her back the hundred stalwart trappers.

Again the battle was short and bloody. But this time the toll was against the marauding Red.

With his arm about Dick's neck Fred stood surveying the field, strewn with the dead bodies of the Sioux braves. On the other side Hattie's arm also encircled the neck of the faithful beast.

"We have paid the debt," whispered Fred.

And the young girl nodded a solemn assent.

Exchange Urges a Metropolitan Plan

John J. Martin, president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, addressed the Newton Board of Trade at Newton, declaring the Exchange is not in favor of any further annexations to Boston proper at this time, but that it does believe the work of the park systems, the sewerage departments, the police and fire departments within twenty miles of Boston should be carried out in a harmonious and comprehensive manner under one general plan.

By J. C. KERRISON.

Harry Grant, who will drive Mr. Zeigler's Isotta car in the Los Angeles race later in the month, is now in the Pacific Coast city and is getting the car in shape for the final contest. Grant's teammate, J. B. Marquis, of New York city, will drive the Sunbeam which Grant purchased in Europe a few months ago.

Henry Ford is now enjoying a vacation in Georgia as the guest of John Burroughs, the poet and philosopher. Thomas A. Edison makes the third member of the party, who are to spend several weeks on the west coast of Florida, far away from the busy marts of business.

W. F Smith and R. L. De Lisser are at the Copley-Plaza making arrangements to close negotiations for the opening up in Boston of an agency for the Briscoe car, which made such a sensation at the New York and Chicago shows.

A million dollars worth of motor cars in a week—one thousand cars in seven days—is the record made by the Thomas B. Jeffery Company at the Chicago Automobile Show just closed.

One hundred and thirty-eight new Jeffery cars were sold for immediate delivery during the exhibition, and while at a dinner given to the Middle Western Jeffery dealers, one thousand cars were ordered for delivery before April 1.

The Ford factory at Highland Park, Detroit, is a never-ending source of joy to the man who has a passion for statistics and comparative figures. He is delighted to discover that there are ten million bricks used in the construction of the buildings, and the fact that there are 475,000 square feet of glass gives his inspection of the plant a new interest. That there are 5,412 machines throughout the factory is of greater interest to him than the construction of a car, and the statement that there are forty-five miles of belting used to run these machines is a tid-bit to roll under the tongue. The man with a passion for figures would also be interested in the statement made recently by a prominent railroad man, who said: "There is a greater amount of business done in the buildings of the Ford Motor Company than is done by any railroad company, with the possible exception of the New York Central and its tributaries."

Captain Larkin and three of the crew were drowned. Chief Officer Fox got gold binoculars for his part in the rescue and the five men who manned the rescue boat got gold medals from the United States government and certificates for extreme bravery.

Sure Indications of Lung Trouble

Among the indications of threatened Lung Trouble are a continued cough, fever and night sweats. A change of climate often helps, but it seems that something more is needed to stop the cough and sweats and arrest the progress of disease. Eckman's Alterative, after many years of use, is known to be most beneficial in bringing about relief. In many cases complete recoveries. Investigate this case:—

Scott City, Mo.

"Gentlemen: I had a terrible cough, night sweats and pleurisy in my lungs. A man who heard me coughing advised me to take your Alterative. I paid no attention to him then. I got so bad the doctor said I should go to Wyoming. I did, and when I got there I steadily grew worse. Then I remembered what had been told me about your medicine. I began taking it, with no faith whatever, but before I had taken three bottles, I could eat anything. Fever and night sweats stopped and for over a year I have been well and in better health than I ever was."

(Affidavit) W. F. ROMAR

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be the most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

J., who was found on the sidewalk near the Longwood tennis courts at Longwood and Brookline avenues, Roxbury, early today and died in the ambulance on the way to the City Hospital.

The man was discovered by two autoists. What caused his death is not known. A book found in his pocket bore the name Samuel Cytron. There was also a coat check of the United States Hotel, where it was learned a man by that name had registered there Sunday. He was seen acting strangely about the hotel last evening.

Pimples Often the Source of Serious Blood Trouble

In thousands of instances blood troubles have been the result of coming in contact with disease germs in public places. And the apparently insignificant pimple has been the cause. It spreads with astonishing rapidity, often infecting the entire system in a few days.

It is fortunate, however, that there is a remedy to cope quickly and thoroughly with such a condition, in the famous S. S. S.

This preparation stands alone as a blood purifier. It is somewhat revolutionary in its composition, since it has accomplished all that was ever claimed for mercury, iodides, arsenic and other destructive mineral drugs, and yet it is absolutely a purely vegetable product. It contains one ingredient which serves the active purpose of stimulating each tiny cellular part of the tissues to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. There are more cases of articular rheumatism, locomotor ataxia, paresis, neuritis, and similar diseases resultant from the use of minerals than most people are aware of. These facts are brought out in a highly interesting book compiled by the medical department of The Swift Specific Co., 303 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is mailed free, together with special information, to all who write describing their symptoms.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today, and be careful not to have something [illegible] to you. [illegible]

The only reason why anyone will try to sell you something in place of S. S. S. is the extra profit.

IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls Do—Tells How She Found Relief.

Sterling, Conn.—"I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and was very weak. I was also bothered a lot with female weakness. I never felt better in my life."—Miss BERTHA A. PELOQUIN, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N. Y.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it 'Anemia and Exhaustion,' and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me out all right."—Miss LAVISA MYRES, Box 74, Massena, N. Y.

MEXICAN TRAIN BANDIT TAKEN; TALE OF HORROR

EL PASO, Feb. 10.—Emelie Garcia, a member of Maximo Castillo's bandit gang which wrecked a Mexican & Northwestern passenger train with the loss of more than two score lives in Big Cumbre tunnel, was captured near Hachita on the New Mexico border today and turned over to the United States military authorities. The arrest was made by Juan Garcia, a secret service agent in the employ of the Constitutionalists.

At first the prisoner denied he was a member of Castillo's brigands, but later confessed he helped concoct the diabolical plot that resulted in the death of many persons including fifteen Americans.

Constitutionalist soldiers escorted Garcia to the line and turned him over to Captain White, U. S. A., commanding the cavalry patrol at that point.

According to dispatches from Hachita the prisoner gave a detailed story of the incident at Big Cumbre tunnel.

"Castillo, the chief of the band, feared that troops were going to be sent against him from Pearson or Casas Grandes," said Garcia, "and decided to blow up the tunnel at Big Cumbre to prevent pursuit. Mines were planted along the tracks in the tunnel, which were arranged to explode on contact.

"After Castillo had planted the mines he held a council with his men and it was decided to wreck a train in the tunnel to make the blockade absolute. Accordingly the bandits took possession of a freight train, set the cars on fire and pushed them into the heart of the tunnel.

"ENGINE TURNED LOOSE."

"Then the locomotive was turned loose on the tracks. To cripple the tracks further more freight cars were lined up on the bridge over the Rio Chico and set afire.

"Castillo did not have any designs upon the lives of Americans or innocent Mexicans. His sole aim was to block the tunnel so that troops could not pursue his band by rail. If it had been known that non-combatants were on the train which was wrecked they would have been warned."

The balance of the brigands took refuges in the mountains a few miles from the Mexican border, Garcia said, and had sent an emissary to General Villa. The bandits want to effect a bargain by which they can save their lives by joining the Constitutionalists' army.

CALLS ENGLAND TO ACCOUNT FOR AIDING HUERTA

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Great Britain's part in the continuation of the Huerta regime was discussed by Secretary Bryan and Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, who came to the State Department following the charge made here that the British minister at Mexico is interested with Lord Cowdray, the oil magnate, in Mexican lands under the protection of the Huerta government.

This report has come to the State Department with increasing frequency. According to the stories circulated, Sir Lionel has been mainly interested in keeping the Huerta de facto government alive until another government sympathetic with the present one should be established.

Today Mr. Bryan admitted that the charges which have come to his department were received from the American embassy in Mexico City. They came in response to the department's inquiry whether some further steps might not be taken to bring the nations of Europe into one way of thinking on the Mexican situation.

MAKES BACKACHE QUICKLY DISAPPEAR

A Few Doses Relieve All Such Miseries. Bladder Weakness, Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism Promptly Vanish.

It is no longer necessary for any one to suffer with backaching kidney trouble, have disagreeable bladder and urinary disorders to contend with, or be tortured with rheumatism, stiff joints, and its heart-wrenching pains, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely relieves all such troubles.

Croxone is the most wonderful remedy yet devised for ridding the system of uric acid and driving out all the piosonous impurities which cause such troubles. It is entirely different from all other remedies. It is not like anything else ever used for the purpose. It acts on the principle of cleaning out the poison and removing the cause.

It soaks right in through the walls, membranes and linings, like water in a sponge, neutralizes, dissolves, and makes the kidneys sift out and filter away all the uric acid and poisons from the blood, and leaves the kidneys and urinary organs clean, strong, healthy and well.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what you have used, the very principle of Croxone is such that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. There is nothing else on earth like it. It starts to work the minute you take it and relieves you the first time you use it.

If you suffer with pains in your back and sides, or have any signs of kidney, bladder troubles, or rheumatism, such as puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, if you are nervous, tired and run down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Croxone will quickly relieve you of your misery. You can secure an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any first-class druggist. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if it fails in a single case.

DRIVEN FROM BALL FOR HER TANGO DANCING, THREATENS TO SUE

Mrs. Claudia De La Mar, who has recently returned from Europe, and who was ordered from the hall by the hotel censor at a charity ball when she showed how the tango is danced in Paris.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The friends of Mrs. Claudia De La Mar were greatly interested today in the story of one experience which she had at a dance shortly after her arrival here from Europe recently.

Paris is a long way from New York, however, and some of its customs are just as distant from the New York idea. When the hotel censor, who was on the floor, saw the dance, his eyes widened.

He quickly stepped forward and touched Mrs. De La Mar on the shoulder. "I am afraid you will have to leave," he said. She became very indignant, but it was of no avail. The censor knew that, while it might go in Paris Mrs. De La Mar would have to go in New York.

Mrs. De La Mar has since felt this criticism so keenly that she threatens to sue.

Nature Will Cure Constipation

All she needs is a very little help.

Constipation is caused by accumulated waste in the Colon (Large Intestine), which, under our present mode of living, Nature cannot entirely remove without a little help.

The rank poisons in this waste get into the blood circulation, too, and make us feel depressed, blue, bilious and incompetent—realy sick if allowed to go a little too far.

All the help that Nature asks, however, is internal Bathing with Warm Water, applied by the "J. B. L. Cascade." This, in a perfectly natural and rational way, cleans out all the waste and poisons from the Colon, and keeps it as sweet, clean and pure, by occasional use, as Nature demands for a perfectly healthy condition.

So invariably successful has this new and improved method of Internal Bathing proved to be, that over 500,000 Americans are now enthusiastically using it to cure Constipation, ward off disease and keep them bright, vigorous and efficient.

The "J. B. L. Cascade" is now being shown by all Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores. Call and let us explain just how simply it accomplishes these great results. Also ask us for booklet "Why Man of Today Is Only 50% Efficient."

RUSH CUTTER TO AID OF ICE BOUND TUG

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Failure to receive word from the naval tug [illegible] caused [illegible] officials of the Navy Department to make preparations to send one of the other tugs as a relief boat in search for the missing vessel, which carries thirty-six men. The revenue cutter Androscoggin, assigned to this duty yesterday, was held by a shortage of supplies and came from Portland, Me., today.

The department has heard indirectly that the tug was sighted in the Bay of Islands and that she is jammed in the ice floe there. As the wireless apparatus on the tug is weak there is a possibility that she [illegible] to get through with the radio station at Sydney, has failed and now is waiting for the ice to break up. The Potomac carried a large supply of provisions intended for the icebound fishermen in the Bay of Islands whom she failed to reach.

SING 'LOVE OF THREE KINGS' FIRST TIME HERE

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The "Love of the Three Kings," a three-act music drama by Italo Montemezzi, was sung for the first time in Boston last night at the Opera. The theatre was crowded, there was much enthusiasm, and all the pleasant features of an opera first night.

The opera was sung by a brilliant cast, the three leading singers being the same who appeared in the Metropolitan at its American premiere, Lucrezia Bori, Ferrari-Fontana, and Pasquale Amato. It will be remembered that this work was substituted for "Francesca Da Rimini" of Zandonai because of the illness of Lina Cavalieri.

The New York performances awakened amazing enthusiasm among the critics. They called it the greatest Italian work since Verdi, and made similar indiscreet statements.

Actually it is a very interesting and able music drama, a marvel of workmanship, neat and smooth. As a novelty it is well worth while. Whether it will take its place in the permanent repertory, side by side with Otello, Carmen, Tristan and the Meistersingers, I do not know, but I should not wish to predict that it would.

The story is grim. A wife is false. She is caught by her husband's father, a blind man, and strangled to death. The savage old man, a King who in his day conquered part of Italy and slew his thousands, places on her dead lips a quick poison. Her lover, prince of the vanquished Italians, kisses the corpse and dies. Her husband, a noble youth, does not wish to live, knowingly sips the poisoned lips. The blind old king is left alone.

The orchestration of this opera is remarkable for its accuracy in painting emotion, its dramatic vigor, its passion, and its tragedy. Unlike Strauss and others, Montemezzi has not found it necessary to confound the ears of his audience to achieve these results. His music is agreeable. His harmonies are frequently strange, but never repelling. His melodies are original. His style is his own; one cannot call him a copyist of Puccini, Strauss or Debussy. In its simplicity it most resembles the Verdi of Otello.

For the voices there are no set arias, even such airs as Puccini places in his operas are too artificial for the realistic Montemezzi. His characters in their dialogue sing sweetly, and there are several wonderful moments for soprano, tenor, baritone and bass. It is all recitative, but melodious recitative.

Ferrari-Fontana has a striking role in Avito, the lover. It is no wonder he electrified the Metropolitan, for his singing in the second and third acts was indescribably thrilling.

Bori also finds herself well placed as Fiora. There is grateful music for her voice and a dramatic opportunity such as is afforded by few operas. She is a consummate actress who makes the most of every scene. The loveliness of her voice is unique. Amato, as Manfredo, the husband, gives a smooth and polished performance. There is not great opportunity for his voice, but he did convey an impression of nobility of character and devotion to Fiora.

The strongest opportunity dramatically is for the blind father, a part played by Ludikar. There is much to praise in his acting, particularly in the second act when he stands between Manfredo and the body of Fiora. He has not got enough voice for the music. That was evident when he did not make any impression at the beginning of the opera with the very dramatic recital of the invasion of Italy.

The stage settings, rushed through in a very few days, were in Urban's best vein, particularly the first and third acts. I did not admire his conception of the terrace scene, and the sunrise was obviously painted on the sky.

Moranzoni did a very remarkable job with the production, considering the fact that he had less than two weeks in which to prepare it. It seems to be a very difficult score for a conductor, since so much depends upon the complete harmony of the action and the music.

Famous For Her Hair

Actress Tells How She Grew It

Madame Rose, the well known actress who played on one of the leading vaudeville circuits the past Winter and who is especially noted for her long, beautiful hair, in a recent interview in Chicago, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can promote the growth of their hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. This is not only the finest hair grower I have ever known, but it prevents the hair from falling out, removes dandruff and scalp humors, darkens streaked, faded gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. The ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost." —Adv.

WALTER CAMP'S COLUMN

First International Yacht Race with England Was Held in 1851—Yankee Boat Beat Rivals by Decisive Margin After Long Dispute Over Conditions for Big Contest

Written Expressly for the Boston American

By WALTER CAMP.

"He's Britain's boast, [illegible]
In peace, my boys, or [illegible]
Here's to the brave [illegible]
The gallant British tar."

AT a time when interest in yacht racing, in view of the international contest, is keen, it is worth while to bring up some of the historical incidents connected with this sport. When you say "International Yacht Race" or "America's Cup" to the average American, it may be difficult for him not to revert in his mind to the one single unpleasant occurrence in those contests.

It is a misfortune of human nature that the happenings that make the greatest impression are those that stir up a public clamor on the matter of disagreement. Later, in connection with the sporting rules, this column will take up, merely as a matter of history, that regrettable incident.

It is a pleasure to turn to the original inception of those races which have interested so many thousands of Americans and Englishmen, as well as yachting enthusiasts of other nations. The very first race, the one that started the succession of contests continuing down to the present year, brought out a fine bit of sportsmanship on the part of the Englishmen, and one which should never be forgotten.

* * *

HISTORY OF GREAT CUP RACES.

THE New York Yacht Club, the first yacht club organized in America, formed in 1844 by a body of nine enthusiasts, had held races for a few years between yachts owned by members. Two of the most enterprising were J. C. Stevens and J. H. Perkins.

In 1851, at the time when the world's fair was held in England, the Royal Yacht Squadron, an organization that ante-dated the New York Yacht Club over thirty years, offered a cup to be raced for by the yachts of all nations. Mr. Stevens that year had constructed a racing schooner to be entered in the contest for the Queen's Cup at Cowes. This schooner was named The America.

When Mr. Stevens arrived on the other side he found that in the race for the Queen's Cup the rules provided a time allowance which was foreign to his ideas, and the impression upon which he had sailed. For this reason he declined to enter the contest. The members of the Royal Yacht Squadron decided that they would meet the visitor on his own grounds and they therefore contributed for and put up another cup in order to see that the stranger received a fair race under his own conditions.

* * *

YANKEE BOAT WON DECISIVE VICTORY.

THE consequence of this was that on August 22, 1851, The America, with fourteen other yachts, contended for what proved to be the beginning of a set of races continuing down to the present day. The America was one of the last boats to go over the starting line, but it had overtaken ten of the others in the first fifteen minutes, and before the course was half covered had passed every yacht in the fleet, and had practically distanced all of them except the Aurora, and was considerably in the lead, even of that cutter. At the finish The America was eighteen minutes ahead of the Aurora.

Now, this incident of offering another cup and without time allowance in order to meet the views of Mr. Stevens, had had little prominence in the minds of those interested in yacht racing of today. As a matter of fact, it is worthy of note that even with the time allowance, while the race would have been very close, The America would have won by nearly two minutes, which, of course, was a great satisfaction to Mr. Stevens and the New York Yacht Club.

* * *

NEW METHOD FOR TITLE RACES.

THERE is an old saying that "great oaks from little acorns grow."

This is no reflection upon the Fourth Company of the Thirteenth Regiment, except that they had not read the rule recently made by the Athletic Congress relating to world's events. They announced in their poster that Hannes Kolehmainen and Abel Kiviat would race at their games for the two-mile championship of the world.

Now the International Athletic Federation, last Summer, voted "No other championship of the world may be held in addition to these (referring to the Olympic games), whether under the title of 'Championships of the world,' 'European Championships,' American or Asiatic championships, or any other name of the kind. The committee, however, may decide on and grant exceptions to this rule."

In reading this law, it looks like either a considerable come-down in the last paragraph or else that it is intended that this committee shall be able to distribute favors of this kind in a rather important way.

Of course, the Fourth Company was immediately notified by Secretary Sullivan of the mistake and requested the withdrawal of the posters, for, after all, there were some other men who might dispute this question, in the person of Jean Bouin, the French champion, Kramer and one or two British runners, who might have liked to be included if it had been going to mean the world's championship.

* * *

NOW Abel Kiviat and Hannes Kolehmainen landed themselves in a peck of trouble with that ill-starred race, for when it was run they succeeded in covering the distance of two miles in a tie in ten minutes five and four-fifths seconds! This is 47 3-5 seconds behind the old record of Bonhag, which is "some going" for two men that have been heralded as likely to break all records.

When it is added to this that these two at this slow time finished in a dead heat, it is easy to understand the wrath of the spectators as well as the strong language of James E. Sullivan, secretary of the A. A. U., and the investigation that followed.

Richards, who captured first high jump honors in the Olympic games at Stockholm in 1912, has received many invitations to compete in games in New York city and elsewhere.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Three representatives of the Harvard Club and a Crescent A. C. player will play today in the semi-final round of the national amateur squash tennis championship tournament. The Harvard men, who will compete, are Malcolm D. Whitman, George Whitney and Alfred Stillman, 2d.

School Notes

The Rindge Technical-Melrose High hockey game has been set for February 23 at the Arena. The Somerville-Melrose game will be played on February 20.

Karl Thielscher, the former star athlete of Brookline High School, has been appointed captain of the Dartmouth freshman hockey team. He has been playing a star game at coverpoint this season.

The Dorchester High relay team is anxious to enter the Penn relay carnival and the boys at the school are trying to win the consent of Headmaster Thomas. Dorchester has a wonderful quartet of schoolboy runners on the team and would undoubtedly give all comers a hard battle.

The Volkmann School track team received a hard blow when it was announced that Jim Knowles is ineligible, due to a faculty edict. Knowles is one of the best 600-yard runners in the school circles this season and he was relied upon to win points in all the track meets on the schedule.

The annual hockey game between Andover and Exeter will be played at the Arena next Saturday. This is the first time that an athletic event between these schools has been transferred from either Andover or Exeter. The game will start at 2:30 and a great crowd is expected.

Russell Dean, captain of the Mechanic Arts swimming team, proved himself to be one of the greatest schoolboy merman ever developed in this city. He was the star of the dual meet against Winthrop High, scoring 27 points out of the total number of 41. Dean won the 25-yard dash, 40-yard, 100-yard, 200-yard, diving for form and was second in the plunge for distance.

RINGSIDE'S
Boxing Chatter

JIMMY CLABBY evidently has not much respect for "Gunboat" Smith's feelings. The Hammond, Ill., boxer is a middleweight, although he declares to all those who will listen to him that he is able to make as low as 145 pounds. The record books also inform us that it is not so many years ago since James was exchanging blows with members of the lightweight division. Clabby once fought our esteemed fellow townsman Matty Baldwin and the Charlestown boy gave him an artistic beating.

Clabby fights "Sailor" Petroskey on the Coast Thursday and he asserts that after he has disposed of the tar he will hurl a challenge at Smith. If Jimmy merely challenges the gunner, all will be well and good, but if he agrees to enter a ring with the "Gunboat" we will probably have one less middleweight to worry about.

THE University A. C. will hold an amateur boxing tournament in Cyprus Hall, Cambridge, tonight. This is the first series of bouts conducted by the Cantab organization and some spirited contests are expected by the "fans." There will be battles at 108, 120 and 140 pounds. There will also be three special tussles. Mike Crowley, national 135-pound champion, will clash with J. Buckley of Chelsea; B. A. Lavelle, former New England middleweight title holder, will meet Henry Duffy of Jamaica Plain, while Dan Manley of Cambridge will exchange blows with Ray Durett, who also hails from the University City.

N. E. Champions to Compete in Nationals

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The New York members of the A. A. U. championship committee, who attended the Boston A. A. games last Saturday night had a conference with A. J. Lill, president of the A. A. U.; Edward E. Babb, Charles Carter, Major F. H. Briggs and Colonel George B. Billings of the New England Association, and it was decided that the association will send all of the winners in the New England indoor championships on February 28 to this city for the national indoor title games at Madison Square Garden on March 2.

Cornell Varsity Crew to Have New Shell

Pickwick Ale on tap

"Many conquests, sir?" inquired Mr. Tupman. "Conquests! Thousands. Don Bolaro Fizzig—grandee—only daughter—Donna Christina—splendid creature—loved me to distraction—jealous father—high-souled daughter—handsome Englishman—Donna Christina in despair—prussic acid—stomach pump in my portmanteau—operation performed—old Bolaro in ecstasies—consent to our union—join hands and floods of tears—romantic story—very—"

In this strain, with an occasional glass of ale, by way of parenthesis, did Jingle proceed.

'By way of parenthesis' is good. When you take an occasional glass of ale—by way of parenthesis—take Pickwick Ale. It has a delicious bitter hop flavor that is exceptional—and is as smooth a drink as you ever ordered.

COMISKEY IS IMPROVED, BUT IS VERY SICK

ROME, Feb. 10.—Although Charles A. Comiskey, president of the Chicago American League club, and one of the best known men in baseball, was somewhat improved today after his sudden attack of illness yesterday, it was decided this afternoon that his condition called for an examination by the roentgen rays to determine how far his heart is affected. His condition was considered serious.

Professor Giuseppi Bastianelli, the noted specialist, is caring for the patient. Comiskey was taken suddenly ill on the train while coming here from Naples with the Giants and White Sox on their tour around the world.

Dr. John Edward Jones, American Consul General at Genoa, and Professor Bastianelli held a consultation in the case today.

STRICKEN ON THE TRAIN.

Mr. Comiskey suffered from a severe chill after passing Caserta and his symptoms rapidly became such that his wife and others, who were with him, became alarmed. They called Dr. Jones, who diagnosed the case as a severe attack of indigestion with marked cardiac symptoms.

On arriving, Mr. Comiskey was taken to a hotel and his condition seemed to improve during the night.

Today's consultation lasted more than an hour, and at its conclusion Professor Bastianelli said all Mr. Comiskey's internal organs were in excellent condition except that there was a suspicion of the existence of stomach trouble, the nature of which may be determined at the examination tomorrow.

POPE WILL RECEIVE PLAYERS.

It was announced this afternoon that the baseball tourists will be received by the Pope, probably tomorrow. This will be the first time, so far as known, that Pope Pius X. has ever given an audience to American baseball players.

Cardinal Merry del Val, papal secretary of state, is a baseball "fan," having learned the game when he was a youthful clerical student. He was considered a good baseball player by his companions. He expressed himself as being very desirous of meeting the world tourists and personally arranged the audience with the Pope, who is also very much interested.

The teams will play games here on Wednesday and Friday and will play at Nice next Sunday.

PRESIDENT GAFFNEY GIVES OUT SPRING TRAINING TRIP PLANS FOR BRAVES' SQUADS

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

JIMMY CLABBY BELIEVES HE [illegible] BEAT GUNBOAT SMITH [illegible] MEET IN RING

"WE'LL SMASH THE FEDERALS," SAYS MURPHY

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—"To com[illegible] with the Federal League," [illegible] Murphy of the Chi[illegible] [illegible] Charles [illegible] [illegible] President James E. Gaffney of the Boston Braves. Both declared their intention of fighting the battle to a finish. The purport of their conversation was that the Federal League was going to "explode," but neither would explain his reason for [illegible] declaration.

As soon as Charles Ebbets, president of the Brooklyn Club, had heard of the position taken by Murphy and Gaffney, he [illegible] himself with [illegible] [illegible] reason [illegible] once, [illegible] Joseph [illegible] baker, recognized as a fairly able shortstop, as a member of the Brooklyn [illegible]. He had [illegible] he hadn't [illegible] decided to cast his lot with the Feds, Ebbets has not been cheerful since.

"SMASH" THE FEDERALS.

[illegible] the Federal League to [illegible] he declared today. "They have [illegible] in the world to invade Brooklyn and get away with it."

Murphy nearly exploded when the possibilities of a third club in Chicago were mentioned to him. He asserted that any plan which would land an American Association team in the Windy City would be unalterably opposed.

"What's the use," he exclaimed. "The Federals will die of over-exploitation if we let them alone. If President Gilmore and Charles Weeghman of the Chicago Federals are coming here with the idea that we will make them a proposition they are making the mistake of their lives. Never."

What Murphy really fears is that some of the big men of baseball are trying to drive him out of the game and he is greatly worried.

WAITING FOR TENER.

The arrival of President John K. Tener from Harrisburg was anxiously awaited by the National League magnates. Tener has had experience in baseball wars, and the club owners expected him to put forth a plan that, as Ebbets put it, would "knock the spots off the outlaws."

While the National League men were gathering for their talk fest the International League owners got down to business in the effort to wind up their meeting today. The chief stumbling block [illegible] of the minor leagues was the settlement of the proposal to let the Jersey City clubs use Ebbets field in Brooklyn. This scheme had been put forth as a means of combatting any Federal plans to invade Brooklyn, but President Fogarty of the Jersey City club opposed it when first broached.

Tomorrow the American League club owners will meet. From present indications the baseball chatterfest is going to last all the week.

PLANS FOR THIRD LEAGUE.

Plans for a third league to combat the influence of the Federal League will be taken by the magnates of organized baseball in a general discussion at a joint meeting on Wednesday, according to President Baker, president of Philadelphia Nationals. Baker said today that no definite steps had yet been taken, but that the matter would be thoroughly threshed out. The cities in which the third league will hold forth should it be organized, are Cleveland, Cincinnati, Washington, Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, Detroit, Buffalo and Baltimore.

Federals Have Just Claim to Players

CHICAGO, Feb. 10—Joe Tinker, manager of the Chicago Federal League club, today said that he had obtained legal advice to the effect that the action of the New York Americans in taking Pitcher "King" Cole from the Federals justified the Federal League in holding claims on [illegible] Agnew, Pitcher Baumgardner and Outfielder Williams, all of the St. Louis Browns.

"The American League insisted that an agreement with Cole was the same as a contract," said Tinker.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. Mitchell

IN a little more than two weeks the [illegible] will be starting for training camp at Macon. So you see baseball, as far as the Boston teams are concerned, is only a little way off.

Some of the other teams are already taking practice in the South. "Bullet Joe" Bush, Grover Cleveland Alexander and a few other players are at Hot Springs and more are to arrive there every day from now on. A few Cleveland players, under Joe Birmingham are at New Orleans getting the kinks out of their systems. Later they will go to Athens, Ga., for the regular training stunt.

Arnold Hauser, of the St. Louis Nationals is at St. Augustine, Fla., testing his damaged knee. Bill Sweeney of the Braves will be on his way to Hot Springs in a few days. Within a week two more clubs will start South for practice.

WITH the arrival at headquarters of Steve Yerkes' signed contract, the Red Sox are in pretty good shape as regards the list of players under contract. It is true that several regulars have not yet come through with their documents, but as they have accepted terms it is only a question of a day or two before they will take pen in hand, etc.

TRIS SPEAKER, who hasn't signed, is with the world's tourists. His decision to make the circle of the globe did not come until the eleventh hour. He had said that he would only accompany the two teams as far as Vancouver, but just before the start was called for Japan he was prevailed upon to go along.

Speaker's contract was mailed to his home as provided for by the American League rules. He may or may not have received it. More likely the contract is still at Hubbard City, Texas, awaiting his return.

THERE is not the slightest feeling of uneasiness at Red Sox headquarters over Speaker. It is not thought the Federals can possibly land him even if they make an effort to do so. Speaker drew down a salary of $9,000 last season. The Feds would have to put up somewhere between $40,000 and $[illegible] to make it an object for Speaker to jump.

Speaker is a pretty cagey individual in money matters. Doubtless he would want the Feds to pay him three years' salary in a lump sum and of course he would demand a big increase over what organized baseball pays him.

RAY COLLINS is the only other regular who has failed to make an agreement with the club on the salary question. It is believed, however, that there will be little difficulty in getting the left-hander into line and both President Lannin and Manager Carrigan confidently expect he will be at Hot Springs with the other players.

The Federal League cuts no figure in Collins' case. It is simply a difference of opinion between him and the club on the salary question. This has happened before with Collins and the club.

Fifty-Second Chapter.

Continued.

HER words hurt me like the sting of a wasp, but I could not resist them, and when some days later M[illegible] to take me to the Geograph[illegible] where his [illegible] mar[illegible] — — [illegible] was to give [illegible] ex[illegible] I [illegible] to refuse [illegible]

Oh, [illegible] of this world from [illegible] living for the [illegible] All that was best [illegible] seemed to be there, the [illegible] were doing the work of the w[illegible] who were [illegible]

The [illegible] was [illegible] a dinner, and I [illegible] the bottom [illegible] of the [illegible] the [illegible]

I found myself [illegible] for Martin [illegible] to make [illegible] he was there.

Towards the end the commander spoke very [illegible] of his staff, saying he could never have reached the 87th parallel if he had not had a crew of the finest comrades that ever sailed on a ship.

"And though they're all splendid fellows," he said, "there's one I can specially mention without doing any wrong to the rest, and that's the young doctor of our expedition—Martin Conrad. Martin has a scheme of his own for going down to the Antarctic again to make a great experiment in the interests of humanity [illegible] when he goes I say 'Good luck to him and God bless him!'"

At these generous words there was [illegible] during which Martin [illegible] a big boy when he [illegible] friends of [illegible]

Fifty Third Chapter

NEXT day, Martin [illegible] down to my sitting room with a sheaf of letters [illegible] saying:

"That was jolly good of the [illegible] but look what he has let me in for."

They were requests from various newspapers for portraits and interviews, and particularly from one great London journal for a signed article to contain an account of the nature and object of the proposed experiment.

"What am I to do?" he said. "I'm [illegible] for stringing [illegible] I can't write anything to save [illegible] Now, you could. I'm sure [illegible] You could write to Robinson [illegible] Why shouldn't you write the article and I'll tell you what to put in it?"

There was no resisting that. And [illegible] at the bottom of my secret heart I was glad of the excuse to [illegible] that I could not any longer [illegible] from Martin because I was necessary to help him.

So we sat together all day long, and though it was like shooting the [illegible] to follow Martin's [illegible] and imaginative speech, I did my best to translate his disconnected outbursts into more connected words, and when the article was written and read aloud to him he was delighted.

"Stunning! Didn't I say you could write like Robinson Crusoe?"

In due course it was published and made a deep impression, for wherever I went people were talking of it, and though some said 'Fudge' and others, [illegible] my husband, said 'Dreams' the practical result was that the great newspaper started a public subscription with the object of providing [illegible] for the realization of Martin's scheme.

This brought [illegible] immense correspondence [illegible] every morning he came down [illegible] armful of letters and [illegible] to me to help him to re[illegible] them.

I knew it would be dangerous to put myself in the way of so much temptation, but the end of it was that day after [illegible] we sat together in my sitting room answering the inquiries of the [illegible] the congratulations of the conv[illegible] and the offers of [illegible] that came from people who wished to join in the expedition.

LIKE NEW LIFE

[illegible] a joy it was! It was like [illegible] of [illegible] life to me. But [illegible] best happiness of all was to protect Martin against himself to save him from his over-generous impulses—in a word, to mother him.

Many of the letters he received were [illegible] He was not [illegible] resist a pitiful appeal, especially if it came from a woman [illegible] it was as much as I [illegible] restrain him from [illegible] himself.

[illegible] I would see him among [illegible] to his side pocket, [illegible]

[illegible] What [illegible] I would [illegible] would [illegible]

[illegible] it out, sir,' I would say [illegible] I would find a fierce de[illegible] sending [illegible] words [illegible] refused to [illegible] a woman who [illegible] trying to [illegible] the [illegible]

[illegible] it was delightful [illegible] seemed to be renewed. If only [illegible] on for ever!

Sometimes my husband and Alma would look in upon us at our work and then, while the color mounted to my eyes, Martin would say,

"I'm fishing with another man's floats, you see."

"I see," my husband would reply, fixing his monocle and showing his front teeth in a [illegible] grin.

"Just what dear Mary loves, though," Alma would say. "I do believe she would rather be sitting in this sunless room writing letters for Mr. Conrad than wearing a coronet at a King's [illegible]

"Just so, [illegible] there are women like that," M[illegible] would answer, looking hard [illegible] when she had gone [illegible] with the [illegible] before he [illegible] to himself.

"I hate that woman. She's like a snake. I feel as if I want to put my foot on it."

At length the climax came. One day Martin [illegible] almost boyish joy, to say that [illegible] had been [illegible] in honor of the [illegible] the proprietor [illegible] is to [illegible] of the [illegible] to [illegible] ladies were [illegible] and I was [illegible] of [illegible]

IN FEVER OF PRIDE

I had [illegible] with my temptation too long [illegible] true to shrink from the dangers [illegible] which I knew [illegible] would [illegible] so when the [illegible] came I [illegible] to the hotel [illegible] pleasure [illegible] pride.

[illegible] the [illegible] speeches [illegible] and the [illegible] like [illegible] seat [illegible] Two [illegible] American women sitt[illegible] were almost [illegible] look[illegible]ing down at [illegible] of opera glasses [illegible] each other which [illegible] upon [illegible] not [illegible] sense of possession [illegible] that I pointed him out [illegible] I then borrowed the [illegible] at the chairman [illegible]

[illegible] light of [illegible] was always [illegible] when he began [illegible] thought the note of the [illegible]

He said that they [illegible] that day opening a new chapter [illegible] wonderful book of man's story, and though the dangers of the great deep might never be entirely overcome, and the wind would continue to blow as it listed, yet the perils of the one and the movements of the other were going to be known to and therefore checked by the human family.

After that and a beautiful tribute to Martin as a man (that everybody who had met him had come to love him, and that there must be something in the great solitudes of the silent white world to make men simple and strong and great, as the sea made them [illegible] and true) he drank to the success of the expedition, and called on Martin to respond to the toast.

There was a great deal of cheering when Martin rose, but I was so nervous that I [illegible] heard it. He was nervous too, as I could plainly see, for after a few words of thanks, he began to fumble the sheets of a speech which he and I had prepared together, trying to read it, but losing his place and even dropping his papers.

Beads of perspiration were starting from my forehead and I knew I was making noises in my throat when all at once Martin threw his papers on the table and said, in quite another voice:

"Shipmates, I mean gentlemen, I never could write a speech in my life, and you see I can't read one, but I know what I want to say and if you'll take it as it comes here goes."

Then in the simple style of a sailor, not always even grammatical yet splendidly clear and bold and natural, blundering along as he used to do when he was a boy at school and could not learn his lessons, but with his blue eyes ablaze he told of his aims and his expectations.

MARTIN'S SPEECH.

And when he came to the end he said:

"His lordship, the chairman, has said something about the good effects of the solitudes of Nature on a man's character. I can testify to that. And I tell you this—whatever you are when you're down here and have everything you want, it's a wonderful strange the way you're asking the Lord to stretch out His hand and help you when you're down there, all alone and with an empty, hungry stomach.

"I don't know where you were last Christmas Day, shipmates . . . I mean gentlemen, but I know where I was. I was in the 85th latitude, longitude 163, four miles south and thirty west of Mount Darwin. It was my own bit of an expedition that my commander has made too much of, and I believe in my heart my mates had had enough of it. When we got out of our sleeping bags that morning, there was nothing in sight but miles and miles or rolling waves of snow, seven thousand feet up on a windy plateau with glaciers full of crevasses shutting us off from the sea and not a living thing in sight as far as the eye could reach.

"We were six in company and none of us were too good for Paradise, and one—he was an old Wapping sailor, we called him Treacle—had the name of being a shocking old rip ashore. But we remembered what day it was, and we wanted to feel that we weren't cut off entirely from the world of Christian men—our brothers and sisters who would be going to church at home. So I dug out my little prayer-book that my mother put in my kit going away, and we all stood round bare-headed in the snow—a shaggy old lot I can tell you with chins that hadn't seen a razor for a month—and I read the prayers for the day, the first and second Vespers, and Laudate Dominum and then the De Profundis.

"I think we felt better doing that, but they say the comical and the [illegible] are always chasing each other, [illegible] can get in first, and it was so [illegible] for just as I had got [illegible] with the solemn words '[illegible] depths we cry unto thee, O Lord, Lord hear our cry,' in jumps old Treacle in his thickest cockney, 'An' Gawd bless our pore ole wives an' sweethearts fur a-wye!'"

If Martin said any more nobody [illegible] The men below were blowing their noses, and the women in the gallery were crying openly.

"Well, the man who can talk like that may open all my letters and telegrams," said one of the young American women, who was wiping her eyes without shame.

What I was doing, and what I was looking like, I did not know until the lady, who had lent me the opera-glasses leaned over to me and said:

"Excuse me, but are you his wife, may I ask?"

"Oh, no, no," I said nervously and eagerly but only God knows how the word went through and through me.

I had taken the wrong course, and I knew it. My pride, my joy, my happiness were all accusing me, and when I went to bed that night I felt as if I had been a guilty woman.

Fifty-Fourth Chapter

I TRIED to take refuge in religion. Every day and all day I humbly besought the pardon of heaven for the sin of loving Martin Conrad.

The little religious duties which I had neglected since my marriage (such as crossing myself at rising from the table) I began to observe afresh, and being reminded by Martin's story that I had promised my mother to say a De Profundis for her occasionally I now said one every day. I thought these exercises would bring me a certain relief, but they did not.

I searched my Missal for words that applied to my sinful state, and every night on going to bed I prayed to God to take from me all unholy thoughts, all earthly affections. But what was the use of my prayers when in the first dream of the first sleep I was rushing into Martin's arms?

It was true that my love for Martin was what the world would call a pure love; it had no alloy of any kind, but all the same I thought I was living in a condition of adultery—adultery of the heart.

Early every morning I went to mass, but the sense I used to have returning from the divine sacrifice to the ordinary occupations of life with a new spirit and a clean heart could feel no longer.

I went oftener to confession than I had done before—twice a week to begin with, then every other day, than every day. But the old joy, the sense of purity and cleansing, did not come. I thought at first the fault might be with my confessor, for though I knew I was in the presence of God, the whispering voice behind the grating, which used to thrill me with a feeling of the supernatural was that of a young man, and I asked myself what a young priest could know by experience of the deep temptations of human love.

The Right to Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Proverbs xxix: 18: Where there is no vision the people perish.

A MOTHER writes to me to complain that her daughter, who is eighteen, spends so much time in dreaming. "Half the time," she grumbles, "she doesn't hear half that is said to her, and when I send her to the store for salt, she returns with sugar. I know what is the matter with her: She is wasting the best part of her life in thinking she is in love."

THE WRONG WORD

"Wasting" is the wrong word, Little Mother. Rather say that she is improving her time, for experience will show that loving, or thinking one is in love, is as essential in the growth of character as exercise is in the development of muscles.

"Where there is no vision the people perish," and she is passing through a vision-building period that is as important as that which comes in later years to the mature man who dreams of a great business success, and plans his working hours to achieve it, or to the mother who croons to the baby on her lap with her eyes fixed dreamily on the day when it will have reached years of maturity.

Every period has its visions, and every vision is the inspiration that sustains and encourages and strengthens the one who beholds it. The man who has no vision retrogrades. His business affairs grow of less importance instead of greater. The woman who has no visions is a failure in every capacity in which life has placed her.

The young girl who has no visions develops into an unimaginative, hard-hearted, narrow-minded, pin-headed woman, who has no more understanding of the language of the human heart than if it were a criss-crossed slab dug out of the tomb of an Egyptian mummy.

LOVE AND CHARITY

The girl who loves, and loves often, is given patience and understanding and love and charity for the foibles and weaknesses of others. Her heart expands; the heart of the woman who never loves becomes atrophied.

She may provoke, torment and anger you with her dreaminess, and her heart may know more sorrow than joy through loving, but nevertheless loving should not be discouraged. It is Love that brings visions, and "Where there is no vision the people perish."

Up-to-Date Jokes

"Oh, Mr. Flipperly," she exclaimed soulfully, "have you ever felt a dim, uneasy sense of oppression as if the mere weight of life were a burden too heavy to be borne by the chained spirit panting with psychic longing to be free?"

"I invariably have such a feeling at Christmas time," was the callous response, "but hitherto I have attributed it to pudding."

* * *

"I'm going to have a fine time on Christmas," said one sprightly young lady to another. "Mr. Huggins is coming to our party, and he is color blind, you know."

"Does his color blindness add to your enjoyment?" asked her friend.

"Rather!" was the reply. "He thinks all the holly berries are mistletoe!"

* * *

The lawyer was drawing up old Furrow's will.

"I hereby bequeath all my property to my wife," dictated the son of the soil. "Got that?"

"Yes," answered the lawyer.

"On condition that she marries again within a year."

The legal light sat back, puzzled. "But why?" he asked.

The aged farmer smiled.

"Because," was the reply, "I want somebody to be sorry I died!"

Didn't Waste More.

"Young man," said the earnest employer, "you should remember that every hour is composed of sixty golden minutes, each set with sixty shining seconds."

"That, sir," courteously responded the young man, "was the motto on the wall of the little red school house which I attended."

"Ah, just so. And I trust that you always bear in mind the wastefulness of idling away your time."

"I try to, sir."

"That is right. Remember that in some lazy moment a wondrous opportunity may come your way. If you fail to see it and to seize it, the whole course of your future may be altered."

"Yes, sir."

"And, therefore, I would urge upon you never to waste your time in foolish amusements, in loafing, in dreaming of the unattainable, or in listening to——"

"In listening to idle talk, sir?" politely suggested the youth.

"Exactly. And, as you have idled five minutes at present, the cashier will be instructed to deduct the proper amount from your envelope. Let this lesson sink in, my young friend, and in time to come you will realize that——"

But the earnest young man had gone, murmuring to himself that, while good advice was an excellent thing, he really wished to save the remainder of his daily wage.

Into a Mirror—Into Tomorrow

Laughing Wrinkles Don't Count

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

HAVEN'T you, little girl who looks into your own smooth face so many times a day, heard folks toss out a phrase like this, "Isn't she the dearest little old lady—she's so jolly!" and this, "She's such a grouchy old thing"?

Haven't you? And hearing it, did you ever wonder what kind of a little OLD lady you would be? I have. Sometimes I've worried, in the fashion femininity has, when I caught myself laughing and saw the little crinkles around my eyes and wondered just how long it would be before the laugh-lines like this, ( ), you know, came 'round my mouth. But that is very foolish. I don't any more, and you must not either. Laughing wrinkles never count! They're the only kind to have. Smile often and long. I've smiled right square in the middle of the sorrows, and my sky's cleared up and the black sorrows have slid right off me like dewdrops from a little yellow duck's back. It works—it truly does. And if you can put your face up to a crystal mirror and SEE your smile, you're happy right away.

Into a mirror is—into TOMORROW. Every time you look within its silver depths, young Bettina, the ghost of the Lady-Heavy-with-Years that you will be peers back at you. It's a way woman has—finding that ghost there in her mirror. So be a smiling girl. Oh be a very smiling girl—so folks will say when you are going through the Autumn woods of your life, "She's the dearest little old lady—pretty and jolly."

Laughing wrinkles don't count—they make for pretty Old Ladies—so be a smiling girl.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"THAT'S a awful cough you got, George," said the Manicure Lady, "and I think that something ought to be did for it before long if you want to keep from pneumonia."

"That cough ain't from a cold," said the Head Barber. "I know what makes it. I smoke too much—and I guess I will have to cut it out. The doctor told me the other day that I ought to let up a little, anyway."

"You do smoke a awful lot, especially lately," said the Manicure Lady. "You didn't have much time to be puffing at one of them cigarettes when business was booming, but now you have all the time in the world between shaves, and I guess your doctor had the right dope. I wonder what makes men smoke and drink, anyhow."

"Oh, it's just a habit, the same as anything else. The doctor said that what made me cough was bronchial trouble. I suppose the cowboys caught it out West first, from their ponies, but it seems that smoking makes it worse. If I quit smoking about all the fun I can have is playing the horses, and they ain't been treating me right lately. The last three goats that I bet on finished as near last as they could, and I just heard that my horse in the third race today came in fourth."

"I think it would be better for you to keep on smoking than to keep on playing the races," said the Manicure Lady. "Smoking may kill you in time, but you will die with enough money to give you a grand burial and leave to your family, and if you keep on playing the horses about another year you will die somewheres in a booby hatch. I tell you, George, you just ought to stop betting on them."

"I have often thought I would cut it out," said the Head Barber, "and now I am going to. The horse that lost for me today is the last horse that ever gets a cent of my money."

"That sounds grand to me, George, and I hope you keep it up," said the Manicure Lady, who had heard the same promise many times. "And as for smoking, if you don't go in to make a chimney out of yourself I guess it won't hurt you no great amount. I was reading in one of the papers yesterday about a old woman over in Scotland that died at the age of 104 years. She hadn't smoked much, only ninety years—that's all. I suppose along toward the last she might have figured that smoking was hurting her a little, but by that time I suppose she had the habit formed. So you see moderate smoking won't hurt so much.

"Brother Wilfred is quite a smoker. He used to puff at a cigarette most of the time, but ever since he read a book called 'My Lady Nicotine,' which is mostly in praise of a pipe or a cigar, he has cut out most of the cigarettes and is going to tobacco in its most manly forms. The old gent likes it better in one way, but in another way he doesn't, because Wilfred goes to father's cigars and smoking tobacco like a tramp going to a hot breakfast. The poor boy never was very bashful about taking what he [illegible] to find strange hiding places for his stock of smoking goods. Wilfred wrote a poem about his pipe. It said:

'Dear, trusty, faithful pipe of mine
I would not be without thee,
There is a taste like sweet wine
And fragrant perfume about thee.
I would not trade thee for a crown,
For when I see the smoke rings
I feel like the greatest man in town,
And as proud as all kings.'"

"He might feel great," said the Head Barber, "but he writes miserable."

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THE first time that Daysey Mayme Appleton met the Baron von Blicherbach she caught a rapturous vision of herself as a Baroness, saying Kind Words to all the hofbrau (or were they hobfrau?), with all the village kinder gathered around.

True, the Baron, a distinguished visitor in this country, had said nothing to inspire such a vision, but it requires no spoken proposal from any man to place a maiden's feet on the threshold of the Promised Land. They just naturally plant themselves there at the sight of every man who is eligible.

"I will give a Dutch lunch in his honor,' said Daysey Mayme; "it will please him to see that I know the customs of his native land.'

The Baron von Blicherbach received the invitation with pleasure and his acceptance was prompt. His round, generous-sized stomach longed for a good home meal of beer, saurkraut, beer, snitzles, beer, damphinoodle, beer, smeercase, beer, bologna, beer, pretzels and beer and blood-pudding. He was a prompt arrival, the end of his nose fairly glistening with anticipation, and his forehead moist with the exertion of getting into his dinner suit.

Daysey Mayme met him in the costume of a Dutch peasant girl, but the desire within him to eat was so great he took little heed of her clothes. All her guests wore the costumes of Dutch peasant girls as they appear on the stage, which is enlightning because it pictures the peoples of other lands wearing clothes the like of which they never wore, and milkmaids in such attire that if a real cow saw them she would be too frightened to give down her milk.

With a nose that had begun to sniff a little apprehensively for the smell of saurkraut, and found it not, the Baron von Blicherbach led the way to the dining room, and saw on the table (instead of the generous piles of bologna flanked by heaps of saurkraut and edged with damphinoodle, and bottles of beer thrown into a cold sweat of terror at his approach) a bowl of pale cerise fruit punch, and a plate containing devil's food sandwiches as large as homeopathic pills.

The Germans are of a phlegmatic temperament, and it takes a great deal to disturb them. The disappointment was a great deal, for with a storm of invectives at the fool American who eats so liddle and dress so mudge in fitness for what aindt already yet, the Baron von Blicherbach put on his hat and left the house.

"These foreign affairs are so disappointing," sobbed Daysey Mayme, recalling the time she gave a fete champetre and her guests, not knowing what it was, came prepared for everything from a wedding party to a sewing bee.

Poor Fellows

During an aviation meeting a woman went through the hangars and asked the usual foolish questions that aviators and their mechanics have to answer.

"But what if your engine stops in the air—what happens? Can't you come down?"

"That's exactly the trouble," responded the willing guide. "There are now three men up in the air in France with their engine stopped. They can't get down and are starving to death."

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were still weak this afternoon, the New York list reflecting this more than the one in Boston. Locally prices were irregular. The advance in copper warrants in London did not sustain copper shares here. One influence of beneficence was the declaration by Utah Consolidated directors of a dividend of $1 a share, which is double the amount distributed in November. The increase was a surprise. Tamarack was a strong issue during the first hour, rising 1½.

In Boston this afternoon Allouez was up 1, United Fruit ¼, North Butte ⅛ and Mohawk ⅛. Among the declines were New Haven ¼, Boston Elevated ¾, American Telephone ⅛, Calumet & Arizona ⅛, Granby ½, Osceola ¼ and Shoe ⅛.

New York losses included Denver & Rio Grande 3, American Car & Foundry 1¾, Canadian Pacific 1¾, Southern Pacific ½, Lehigh Valley ½, New Haven ⅛, Northern Pacific ⅛, Baltimore & Ohio ⅜, Union Pacific ⅞, American Can ⅛, Steel ⅜, Amalgamated ⅛ and American Smelting ⅝. Missouri Pacific and Rock Island issues showed small gains. Reading and American Telephone were unchanged.

DEMAND WAS LIGHT.

There was very little demand for stocks when the New York market opened and it did not take much selling to send prices down. A number of issues were exceptionally weak and this hurt the tone of the market. Americans had been irregular in London and weak on the whole. The taking of gold for export, while not affecting money rates, gave no satisfaction. Another deterrent was reports from Washington concerning proposed legislation against speculative and financial interests. Wall Street does not expect the worst, but is afraid that in the end its activities will be somewhat hampered by new laws.

TRADING PROFESSIONAL.

The market was hardly weak, although the values ranged lower. It was a field of professional operations only and temporarily most traders are on the bear side. Underlying all this is a persistent belief that there will be a resumption of buying from the outside before long.

It is reported from London that Americans are less in favor there because of fear that the Mexican situation will take an untoward course. Whatever support the British government may be rendering President Wilson, there are British capitalists who are suspected of being much in favor of the Huerta regime.

U. S. STEEL TONNAGE.

The effect of the statement by the United States Steel Corporation as to unfilled tonnage at the end of January was slight. It reported an increase of 331,572 tons. The December figures showed a decrease, so that today's statement indicates that the steel trade improved last month. Unfilled orders on January 31 amounted to 4,613,680 tons, against 4,282,108 tons on December 31, 4,396,347 tons on November 30, and 7,827,368 tons on January 31, 1913.

WEAK INDUSTRIALS.

Rock Island issues were higher at the start because of the statement that its directors have not even discussed the possibility of the road passing to a receivership. Within a few minutes most of the gain was lost. Several low priced stocks declined materially. The British court decision against the White Star line in connection with Titanic disaster liability depressed Mercantile Marine preferred nearly two points. Westinghouse, Studebaker and Goodrich were industrials to decline fractionally. Almost all railroads were lower during the first hour, Denver & Rio Grande receding several points and New York Central touching a new low for its present slump. On the Curb there was continuation of the widespread selling of Standard Oil issues. Atlantic Refining, which fell more than 100 yesterday opened 27 lower this morning.

Steel sold under 65 but after the tonnage figures were published rallied and this issue had as sturdy support as ever. Trading was very quiet in the second hour and the total of transactions for the morning was not much above 165,000 shares. About the only business of importance was in Steel.

By noon there were few active issues that did not show losses, but the latter averaged small. American Smelting, American Sugar and Canadian Pacific were among the weakest.

NEW TRUST COMPANY.

The Massachusetts Trust Company is now open for business and has its banking quarters in the John Hancock Building, Federal and Franklin streets. The premises are those formerly occupied by the Eliot National Bank. It has a capital of $500,000, a surplus of $250,000 and began business with every facility for becoming one of Boston's biggest banks. It announces itself as an absolutely independent institution. Former Mayor Edgar B. Champlin of Cambridge is president, former State Treasurer Elmer A. Stevens is vice-president, Charles D. Buckner is treasurer and Arnold Whittaker is assistant treasurer. Besides handling commercial accounts, it will make a specialty of its savings department.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The London copper warrants market was strong today, spot and futures advancing 17s. 6d. They had lost 2s. 6d. at the close.

It is stated that a receivership for the Rock Island Road has not even been discussed by its directors. There are eight or ten reorganization plans under consideration.

Fact and Comment on Finance and Business

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The National City Bank, which holds one-twenty-fifth of the country's national bank resources, is to go into the new currency system, but if it finds the conditions unfavorable it will go out again, I learn from a personal friend in Paris who is in a position to know about the Stillman-Vanderlip deliberations.

The City Bank, I am informed by the same high authority, hesitated to enter the new system because, to use the exact words of the communication, "it was much afraid that the western and central banks may be tempted to discount too easily farmers' or local schemers' bills, thereby causing a tremendous inflation, the burden of which would eventually fall back upon the New York Reserve Association."

* * *

That it would be easier for a national bank to "liquidate" and become a State institution after joining the new system than before is generally recognized, as the readjustment of country bank deposits would then have been effected.

President Vanderlip of the City Bank would not discuss the subject when questioned yesterday.

* * *

I can state, however, that in very influential banking circles, private and national, the fear is expressed that inordinate credit expansion will be fostered later on by the release of an enormous mass of gold reserves heretofore lying dormant.

* * *

Two things are likely to happen once the system is in full blast:

1—Abnormal inflation at home.

2—Very heavy exportation of American gold to Europe.

* * *

From the best informed international banking sources I learn that the great central banks of Europe have been influenced to lower their discount rates by the knowledge that hereafter they will be able, they reckon, to draw upon America for whatever gold they may need. Our probable loss of the metal is estimated at not less than a quarter of a billion dollars.

* * *

France, Germany and England are all greedy for gold.

* * *

The two leading continental banks have been scrambling for foreign supplies ever since the Moroccan scare. The German Emperor is quoted as having replied tartly, when told that there was not an ample war chest ready, that next time he would expect a different answer. Since then the Imperial Bank of Germany's gold holdings have been increased to unparalleled figures.

* * *

Yesterday the Bank of France took $2,000,000 gold from New York, notwithstanding that exchange rates here are on a gold import, not export, basis, so anxious is the French institution to pile up the all-important yellow metal. It has systematically levied upon America's supply of gold ever since the competition with its rival, the Reichsbank, began. Price has been a secondary consideration. If a stiff premium had to be paid it was paid.

* * *

The Bank of England is today carrying only $217,000,000 gold, in contrast with $710,000,000 held by the Bank of France and $317,000,000 in the German bank, to say nothing of the supplementary stocks of silver in the treasury of the two continental institutions. Now the huge joint stock banks in England have in their own vaults no gold reserves to speak of. They rely entirely upon the meagre reserve in the Bank of England.

* * *

Will not the English banks take advantage of the opportunity afforded by America's new currency system to inaugurate in earnest the accumulation of gold reserves, a step long advocated by the best authorities and one that is today more imperative than ever before in view of the policy persistently pursued across the English Channel? My guess is that such a movement will be witnessed. If the English banks do not undertake it voluntarily, the government may take a hand, as has been hinted more than once in the past.

* * *

The more our new currency scheme is studied in all its possibilities and probabilities the clearer becomes the vital necessity of choosing to administer it men of broad-gauge calibre, ripe in practical experience, free from petty political or financial prejudices and commanding universal respect. One or two members of the Federal Reserve Board should be bankers of international training, experts able to diagnose the meaning of all oversea developments and to recommend whatever action may be deemed necessary to protect the interests of this country.

* * *

May I add that the current accumulating of idle funds in New York and elsewhere represents only in part the slackening in trade. It reflects the scrutinizing of credits throughout the country and curtailment of facilities in many instances. A vigorous effort is being made to bring business concerns into a more liquid condition.

FUTURE BRIGHT, SAYS PATTERSON 'SUNSHINE' MAN

John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, O., who sees brighter prospects in business, is optimistic after visiting many large centres of trade in the United States. He is spending two days in Boston and in turn will visit every important city of the United States and Canada.

While in Boston he is attending a conference with his agents at the Parker House, where methods of business have been discussed.

"Every business man should be hopeful," said Mr. Patterson today.

"I am very glad that the AMERICAN has started a Sunshine Club. Put my name down as a member. The newspapers have such influence nowadays, and they have a splendid opportunity to get the best before the masses. While the ministers give this spirit of optimism in their sermons, the papers have such vast privileges before them and when they use them aright the results are stimulating.

THE RIGHT MOVE.

"The mere starting of a Sunshine Club is a move in the right direction. It gets the common mind thinking in the most hopeful vein.

"Now we must all feel that conditions are growing better, yes, brighter, but let us be cautious. Don't let us be optimistic without some foundation. We are getting that foundation. Don't let us build too hastily. Careful and wise progress in business, the restoration of confidence, and the co-operation on the part of large industries with one another, are manifesting themselves on all sides.

"While I have not been all over the ground, having just compassed some cities in my travels, spending two days in every one, yet I've seen enough to justify the confidence I feel, that business is advancing and one of the chief requisites is to put our best in the efforts that are being made in its behalf.

"KEEP WELL."

"The businessman, to get into the right trim to meet his business cares and responsibilities, must attend to his health. You get a man with poor health, trying to face his difficulties, and you get a man that is more or less depressing in his outlook.

"Take the best care of your health. Look after your liver. If you have good health, you can tackle your business cares with stronger fortitude than to be a sufferer from indigestion.

"Don't let your poor health, which means more or less depressed feelings, show itself in business.

"Keep strong. Take plenty of exercise daily. Don't let little things worry you. If you can't make that particular deal in business today let it go for the next day, but be sure that you are facing your business problems with a strong physical condition. That's the way to kill some of this pessimism which some place in the business outlook. It is really the weakened physical condition that is speaking here and nothing else.

BRIGHTER PROSPECTS.

"Yes, I believe that business is improving. We must all work together. We must advocate co-operation. If one large business suffers, then some other business will suffer with it. If trade is good in the United States we must aim to make it good in Canada. Work together in business, keep up your courage, eat slowly, think long and patiently, take all the sleep you need. Don't be afraid to work hard when you are feeling well. Good health above everything else makes people better able to face their problems and master them today in the business world."

JOHN H. PATTERSON of Dayton, O., National Cash Register head, who is latest recruit to the Sunshine Club.

Rev. C. T. Brady Gives Up Pulpit

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, the noted historian and novelist, who has been for about one year rector of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, one of the fashionable parishes of Mount Vernon, has resigned, effective September 1, unless an earlier date is agreed upon. Mr. Brady has refused to discuss the matter further than to say that the salary he is receiving is inadequate.

Rockefeller Buys Mexico Oil Industry

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 10.—John D. Rockefeller is reported to have purchased the Guayule oil property from the Maderos for 11,000,000 pesos or about $5,500,000 American money. The deal is said to be the largest in the history of the oil industry and should give the Rockefeller interests sufficient footing in Mexico to compete successfully with the Pierson interests headed by Lord Cowdray.

Limit Corporations' Profit, Says Grosscup

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Discussing the "trust" problem with the AMERICAN correspondent, Judge Peter S. Grosscup of Chicago, said: "I believe the best remedy is to limit the private profits of corporations, surplus net earnings to go to the people or to be considered as taxes. Such a plan would have the advantage of automatic enforcement and would tend to cheapen products, maintain wages at a just level and prevent inordinate growth of private corporate power.

Calls Mince Pies Too Extravagant

Denouncing the mince pie of today as making for extravagant tastes, Mrs. Mary H. Moran, head of the kitchen and lunch room of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, says that this pie, with forty-two scientific processes required in its manufacture, is bad and that the attention of the patrons of the lunchroom had better be directed to more ideal channels.

DOGS AND MEN—Even Some Dogs Will Not Crawl Back to the Man Who Kicks Them

There are two extraordinary features of the appointment of John A. Sullivan to be Corporation Counsel.

One is the fact that James M. Curley should give such a job to a man whom he recently denounced as a pool shark, a political corruptionist, a protector of graft in his own family and a man "interested in at least five barrooms of a loathsome character."

The other strange feature is the fact that John A. Sullivan should be willing to serve under a man, or should accept anything from his hand, who had caused to be embalmed forever in the public records these ugly charges against his character, a taint on his name and on the pride of his descendants so long as the public records exist.

There are thousands of men in this city who would starve before they would take a crust of bread from a man who had said one-half the things of them which James M. Curley recently said of John A. Sullivan.

The willingness of John A. Sullivan to accept the position from Mayor Curley shows at least that Sullivan COULD be guilty of all these charges and still lead the life he has led in the past six years, the tool of a group of men who used him to weed the little vices of little men while their own big vices were left to grow.

In most men there is an instinct which leads them to say to themselves when they are tempted to criticise people who are no worse than they themselves are: "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone." A sensitive man always feels the force of this warning.

If John A. Sullivan were a sensitive man he could not have served on the Finance Commission and been guilty of the charges Mr. Curley makes against him.

But he shows that he is not a sensitive man when he accepts a job at the hands of Mayor Curley.

There are some well-bred dogs, and even some mongrels, who would not crawl back to the man who kicked them when he holds in his hand a piece of meat.

Make It a Go-to-Church Day Every Sunday in the Year

The very handsome voluntary tributes paid by the clergymen of this city to the Boston AMERICAN for suggesting to them the Go-to-Church Sunday plan and for steadfastly, day in and day out, for several weeks, giving to the churches all the aid and support that a great newspaper could give, are fully appreciated by the AMERICAN.

The AMERICAN realizes that the bare suggestion would not alone have filled the churches of Boston and New England to overflowing without the sympathy and wonderful aid that the clergymen and laity gave to the splendid movement.

Go-to-Church Day was really a great success. If the churches can be crowded to overflowing one day in the year, what is to prevent them from being crowded on every other Sunday?

The fault does not belong to the ministers. It is not for lack of enthusiasm on the part of those who occupy the pulpits. It is not because the musical programs are not elaborate.

Is it because the great public is not paying as much attention to the church and to Bible teachings as it ought to pay? Are men and women relaxing their religious efforts? Are they supporting the churches and the ministers as they ought to support them?

We fear they are not.

The ministers are doing their part zealously. The newspapers of Boston can help the ministers by giving more space to church news, the churches can help by advertising in the advertising columns of the newspapers and the public can be educated to do its duty—which is to GO TO CHURCH EVERY SUNDAY IN THE YEAR.

The AMERICAN has always given a large share of space to religious news and religious movements. It has been a steadfast upholder of the good work by the churches, and it will do more than ever in the years to come to help the ministers educate the people to a realization of their full duty. That means large congregations in all the churches every Sunday in the year.

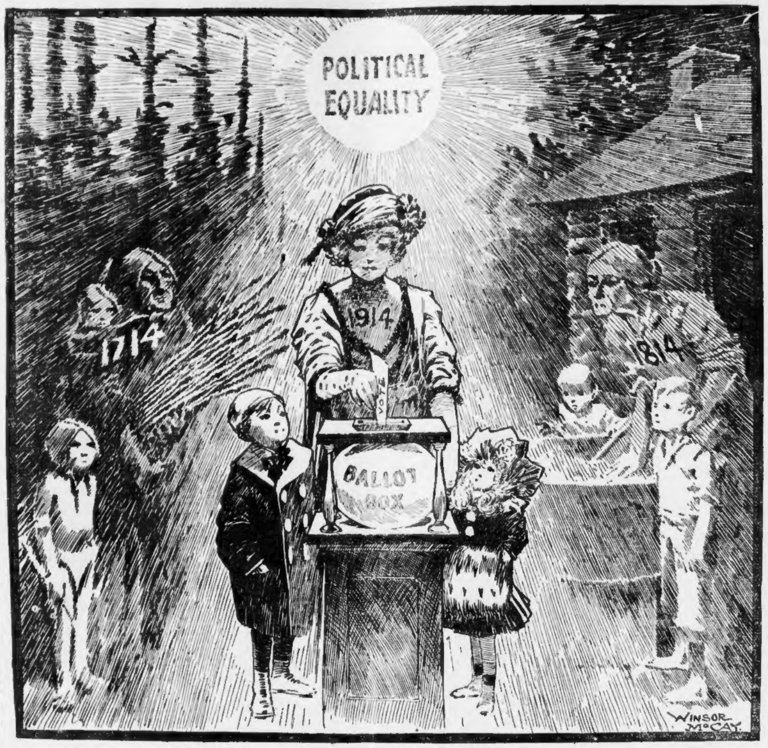
Questions Answered

M. E. S.—It is far too early as yet to say just what changes the Panama Canal will make in the currents of commerce. It is fair to draw the inference that it will take much from the transcontinental railways, and that it will greatly decrease the business that is at present done through the Straits of Magellan. It is also well nigh certain that it will have no good results for some of the Mexican railways, as well as for many of the South American steamship lines; but we must wait for some time before we can tell just what changes the big ditch will make.

P. C. F.—You are mistaken in maintaining that Darwin taught the doctrine that man sprang from the monkey tribe. Darwin nowhere says any such thing. His teachings, while resting upon the "development" or "evolution" theory, nowhere assert that mankind sprang from the simian breed, except in a way that need give us no alarm. The consanguinity is so remote that no blush need come to our faces in thinking upon the subject. It is high time that the great English thinker was cleared of the vulgar insinuation that has for so long been thrown out against him.

THIS IS REAL PROGRESS



The enthusiasm of Chicago women for the ballot has answered the argument that women do not want to vote. The suffrage wave is coming Eastward and it will not be long before this picture will illustrate progress in Massachusetts as it does now in Illinois.

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XXIX.

FOR a second after she saw Delaine awaiting her, Julia Marvin felt a strong impulse to turn and hasten in the opposite direction. Calm second thought told her such a move would be foolish. Delaine had seen her and knew she had recognized him. She walked on and when she came abreast of the man tried to pass him with a slight inclination of the head, but he was not so easily snubbed. He lifted his hat and, making no effort to stop her, fell into step at her side. His first words and the embarrassed manner in which he spoke them, checked Julia's rising indignation.

"I really want to speak to you, Miss Marvin, or I should not have taken this (shall we be charitable and say unconventional?) way of addressing you. Please forgive any seeming rudeness. I—I—I am not a—well, a masher, nor do I make a practice of speaking to young ladies who show that they are not especially willing to talk to me. You must believe that—won't you?"

There was a boyish appeal in his voice, and Julia's tone was kinder than she had meant it to be when she replied:

"Of course I believe you, Mr. Delaine," she answered him. "What is it you wish to speak to me about?"

"Several things," he returned more confidently. "In the first place, will you be so good as to give your sister a message from me? Please tell her that I have been called out of town for tomorrow and that I will not, therefore, expect her at my rooms. I did not learn until after she had left at noon today that I would be obliged to go away, and I do not know her address—so I must trouble you to deliver my message. That is the chief excuse I must plead for waiting on the corner near Baird's for you. Am I pardoned?"

"Indeed you are," Julia said with one of her rare smiles, and Delaine flushed with pleasure.

"Now if I am really forgiven," he continued, "won't you let me delude myself into the idea that I am a plutocrat? Let's take an auto ride—on a bus—as far as the street you live on at any rate."

Julia shook her gravely. "I can't afford that kind of thing, Mr. Delaine," she objected.

"You surely don't think"—he began protestingly, but she interrupted him.

"I mean that I have made it a rule since I came to the city never to accept favors from anyone whom I do not know well," she explained. "I don't see how I can make an exception in your case. Do you, Mr. Delaine?"

The man walked along beside her in silence for a moment. Then he spoke slowly and seriously.

"Come and sit in the Public Garden for a few minutes, won't you? I want to talk to you."

She nodded in silence and together they strolled to the Garden. The grass shone like emerald in the late afternoon sunlight. The two chose a spot in the shade and sat down. Delaine came to the point without any preliminary hesitation.

"Miss Marvin," he said bluntly, "I wish that we could be friends—you and I. I'm not a Socialist, but I'll be hanged if I can see why the fact that we both work for our living should stand between us and friendship. To be perfectly frank—I have liked you ever since I first saw you. The oftener I speak to you the more you interest me. Won't you put aside your rules and scruples in this one case and let us just be pleasant conventional acquaintances? For the life of me I do not understand your reason for avoiding me so persistently. I am not a cigarette-smoking, liquor-drinking, black-mustached villain. I have few women friends. I want very much to count you as one of them."

He paused, and as Julia did not reply he went on: "Another thing I have to say. I want to apologize for asking you to take lunch with me yesterday. I never did such a thing on so short an acquaintance before. I had no right to do it then."

"You went to lunch with my sister on that very same day," Julia reminded him sternly.

"I beg your pardon," he said, looking at her in blank astonishment.

She repeated her remark.

"I did no such thing!" he exclaimed abruptly.

"Are you sure?" asked the girl, a sarcastic ring in her voice.

"As sure as that I am sitting here," he declared. "After I left you I went up to my club and lunched there in solitary state. Who ever told you such a yarn."

His tone and manner convinced the listener that he spoke the truth, and her face paled suddenly. She passed a trembling hand over her eyes.

"I don't feel very well," she faltered. "I think I will go home now."

"You don't go by yourself when you look like that," asserted Delaine. "Poor, child, you are as white as a sheet. Let me take you in a cab."

"No," answered Julia resolutely. "I prefer to go alone, if you please." Even in her fright she saw the disappointment in his eyes and felt vaguely sorry for him. "Thank you for your kindness, Mr. Delaine," she said hurriedly, holding out her hand. "I shall write you if—if I ever want your help. Goodby!"

She had returned his hand clasp and was hurrying away along the winding walk of the little park before he found his voice. He looked after her pityingly. He understood now what her alarm meant. "When I got hold of Somerdyke," he muttered, "I'll punch his head good and plenty for him!"

Julia sped on homeward, her heart keeping time with her racing feet. Intuitively she knew now that Caryl had been deceiving her—for how long she could not tell. Where and with whom had the child been?

Outside the door of her room Julia paused to catch her breath and try to plan what to say to Caryl on entering. Then she pushed the door open and went in. The room stood empty in the gathering shadows, and her feet sounded loudly on the bare floor. Her bureau drawer stood open and the contents were in an untidy mass.

On the bureau lay a scrap of folded paper.

What Is Carbon?

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"WHAT is carbon? What is carbonic acid? What is carbonic oxide."

A.—I do not know what carbon is. Carbonic acid is a compound of carbon and oxygen; one atom of carbon being chemically united with two of oxygen in each molecule.

Carbonic oxide is the name given to the molecule made up of one atom of each element, carbon and oxygen. I do not know what anything is. For everything is made of electrons; these are electricity; but I have no idea as to what that is. I may get a rubber type reading: "I do not know." This will save many quarters of seconds of golden time when writing.

Q.—"What is the process of levitation, the lifting of heavy weights, without the application of force, or any mechanical power?"

A.—This has been done from periods before any history. The cause is totally unknown to any one of the great standard mathematical sciences. I cannot answer this question by reference to any known law of nature.

Stars and Stripes

At the Milwaukee Zoo right now they are curing monkeys of tuberculosis by the fresh air treatment. The monkeys help by putting on their Winter coats.

"Drunken man who ran his car over a boy gets five years in prison." Don't look so incredulous; this was in New Jersey.

It is said that Mr. Bryan never asks the price when he goes shopping. He asks a very good one when he goes lecturing, however.

Chicago surgeons, to avoid sewing up sponges in patients on whom they operate, will tie a large silver check to each sponge. What's to prevent 'em forgetting the check as well?

Professor Taft, the only living ex-President with thirty-five pairs of trousers, is giving Canada a lot of valuable advice about dealing with corporations. He must have thought it up since leaving office.

Austrian field marshal who ordered women not to wear slit skirts is now considering the least humiliating way of withdrawing his order.

Kaiser intends to pacify Alsace by sending an imperial prince to rule it. Must be some strange satisfaction in being bossed by a royalty.

Mother and Daughter—Those Who Live Together in a Hate-Bound Existence Are Sure to Reap Punishment Sooner or Later.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

WHOEVER has eyes wherewith to see, ears wherewith to hear, and a mind capable of thinking even along simple lines, must realize the brevity of this life and the importance of getting all the happiness possible out of it.

Unless happiness is obtained and given in the home circle, it is not to be found anywhere.

A feverish excitement and temporary pleasure may be enjoyed in outside ways, but the mind which carries in its depths the thought of wetched home conditions cannot find real happiness anywhere.

A mother who is a widow writes that her daughter, an only child, was given every loving care and all possible opportunities for moral instruction. The daughter married and became a mother, and the widowed parent lives under the same roof.

Since her marriage the daughter has become quarrelsome and even abusive.

The mother says: "I have suffered long years in silent patience, fortitude and grief; she has crushed me so I have not dared to answer her back, humiliated in every sense of the word, until I felt my womanhood was lowered to such an extent that a shame crept over my conscience to allow a child to silence me, so I stormed at her at last and told her all what she deserved.

"It is useless, dear lady, to describe every detail of my sufferings. My outbreak has surprised her, and now she has become silent, and one year has passed since she has spoken one word to me.

"When visitors call she is sarcastic, which embarrassment causes me annoyance.

"She has ordered me out of her rooms. I have no privilege at all, and was told to remain in my own room, in which lonely gloom I have passed the Winter and Summer. I am far advanced in years, but I thank God for the perfect health and strength I have.

"My motive for writing you this letter is for your kindly advice. I am so weary, so lonesome in this room, my heart is going."

Without doubt there is another side to this story. Without doubt the mother has trying and irritating qualities which have helped to bring about this trouble.

But even so, there is only one opinion to be held of such a daughter, and only one thing for the mother to do, and that is to go away and make her home elsewhere.

Perfect health and strength she says are hers, and let her resolve to turn that health and strength to practical uses and to find employment and make a home for herself.

After she has made her arrangements to go away, it would be well to talk quietly with the daughter, to apologize for whatever words had been spoken in anger, and to part with no ill-will. But to part absolutely and live under a separate roof.

Then to talk to no one of this trouble. To ask for no sympathy. But to go about the task of making a new start in life at a late day and proving to the world that there is no such thing as an age limit for a woman who sets forth determined to be independent.

The most menial labor which insures food and shelter would be happiness in comparison with life under such conditions as this letter describes.

People who live together and indulge in quarrels and bitter feelings, and angry or sullen moods, are making purgatories for themselves and others here on earth and in realms beyond; for just as we fashion our lives here and now, so will be the life beyond when we pass from the body.

It is sad to think of the wretched hate-bound life this daughter is fashioning for herself, and on the misery she must endure when she goes into the next state of consciousness and realizes the enormity of her sin.

For ill-temper, anger, discord, hatred and all its attendant evils are crying sins, and must bring their bitter punishment.

As we sow, we must reap.

Love a Tonic, Gladness a Cure

By ELBERT HUBBARD

THERE are some disadvantages that naturally accrue where any one policy of life is carried to an extreme.

On this last point the learned Dr. Kulmitz, physician to the King of Siam, has recently contributed a little pamphlet, a copy of which the doctor was so kind as to send me.

In this booklet the claim is made that all diseases are caused by either too much excitement or not enough.

Excitement of course increases the heart-beat—the pulse runs up, the eyes begin to glisten, thought flows—all the secretions are active.

Up to a certain point this is well, for the digestion is aided, lungs expanded, and the glands, through exercise, are in condition to do their perfect work.

But if the excitement is continued beyond this certain point, the bodily functions become deranged, the nerves get tired of the tension, and eventually we will have a case of "nerves," variously known as "Americanitis" or nervous prostration, with a fine array of local symptoms, covering every sort of twinge and tired feeling.

On the other hand are the diseases and complaints that come from lack of excitement—that is, too much Canned Life. The poor creatures perish for the lack of a fresh thought. First in the list of diseases caused by the lack of excitement our learned author names cancer, which he explains is caused originally by a faulty circulation.

A stoppage occurs, and Nature tries to relieve the distressed point by sending more blood to the spot.

Then we get congestion and next inflammation.

A certain amount of excitement at the right time, the author avers, would have freed the system from all congestion and made cancer impossible.

There is also a whole round of maladies that can be cured by a new thought, a new sensation, or new surroundings.

A little excitement or a new experience often clears the cobwebs from the brain.

Elizabeth Barrett was suffering from a partial paralysis, and a low degree of nerve force that was fast pushing her in the direction of melancholia. In fact, she was suffering from too much Canned Life. Love came to her, and she literally, as well as poetically, ran away, and got well.

This, of course, is an extreme case, but there are times in the life of every one when people pall, liver strikes, aches intervene and visions of an operating table, sterilizing pans, nurses with white caps, and a doctor with bushy whiskers and rolled-up sleeves. Everything seems to be going to the devil.

When lo! there comes one bearing glad tidings. A new thought takes possession of us—we laugh and listen to a story or two and tell one—we go for a walk, the clouds lift and we forget we ever had a doubt or pain.

Isn't this the healing principle of all so-called New Thought—simply good news?

God is good, there is no devil but fear; nothing can harm us, the universe is planned for good!

Ah! a new thought—all life is one, and we are brothers to the birds and trees. Our life is a necessary and integral part of the energy that turns the wheeling planets and holds the world in space.

All life is one—God is on our side. We are freed from fear, emancipated from apprehension, and filled with kindness toward every living thing, because all is ours, and we are a part of all we hear and feel and see.

Circulation is increased, secretions flow, eyes brighten, beautiful thoughts animate us. Saved by an idea!

New thoughts are hygienic.

Love is a tonic.

All life is one—God is on our side.

We are well.
